Il Duce Warns of War, Demanding Hands Off Italians With Franco

Threat Shakes Europe as French Leftists Seek League Action.

Nazi Press Admits Defeat of Rebels

Nations' Breach Widens; 82,000 Hostages Slain, Loyalists Claim.

The Crisis Abroad.

Premier Mussolini warned that Europe will be "on the precipice of war" if attempts are made to interfere with Italy's role in the Spanish civil war.

David Lloyd George told the British House of Commons that failure of Britain to resist Italian imperialism is endangering world peace.

The German government was reported near a diplomatic break with the Vatican as result of Pope Pius' recent attack on the Reich.

A French official charged the United States with responsibility for the world-wide naval race.

Senator Nye urged that the State Department rule on an American embargo against arms shipment to nations participating in the war in Spain.

The Spanish government warned against interference with her shipping by nations participating in the international patrol to halt the influx of volunteers to Spain.

Duce Warns Europe.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, March 25—Premier Mussolini, flaunting defiance before a continent spiked heavily with armaments, today warned that Europe will be "on the precipice of war" if attempts are made to interfere with Italy's role in the Spanish civil war.

The Italian warning, aimed at Leftist France, where agitation mounted for League of Nations punishment of Mussolini for his refusal to withdraw Italian troops from Spain, struck fear among Europe's statesmen.

They remembered vividly how 18 months ago Il Duce defied the world powers who tried to prevent his conquest of Ethiopia—and how he succeded.

"War Scare" Mounts.

The alignment of European nations into two hostile groups—Fascist and Communist—stood out in threatening proportions tonight as rapid developments in a half dozen capitals served to spread the greatest "war scare" since 1918. They were:

Italy's announcement that if France appeals to the League of Nations Europe will be close to armed conflict and that Italy will refuse to participate in any Geneva discussions of Italian volunteers—even under the menace of international military sanctions.

France's proposals for a virtual naval blockade of war-torn Spain to check the flow of munitions and volunteers.

Britain's unwillingness to join the French scheme because she will not risk war with Italy and Germany—the Fascist powers of Europe—in order to make neutrality effective.

German newspapers' support of Italy following Russia's charges before the international non-intervention committee that Mussolini is wantonly violating his neutrality pledge by sending fresh troops to Spain.

Unofficial German charges that Soviet Russia alone is responsible for events in Spain and that "isolated procedure" against any other power would be unjustified.

David Lloyd George, war-time premier of England, told the House of Commons that he was "unable to conceive of anything so full of possibilities of trouble as the conflict in Spain." He added that Mussolini is determined to establish a Fascist satellite state in Spain.

It was apparent to diplomats, who kept the telephone lines of Europe

Lloyd George Taunts Britain For Failure to Resist Il Duce

Refusal to Combat Imperialism in Ethiopia and Spain Menaces World Peace, He Tells Tense Commons.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 25.—Failure of Great Britain to resist Italian imperialism in Spain and Ethiopia is endangering world peace, David Lloyd George charged today, leading a heated attack in Commons against Premier Mussolini and British foreign policy.

"Stand up to Mussolini!" Lloyd George shouted. "Earn some respect for Britain. He is no fool. He knows with whom he is dealing.

"If he had been dealing with men who spoke in the name of Britain, with the might of Britain behind them, he would not have talked like that. I hope the time will come when we shall talk in a straightforward, fearless manner."

Opposition spokesmen, in a house tensely silent, assailed Il Duce for "brutal butchery" in Ethiopia and for alleged Italian intervention in Spain, denouncing what they described as wavering British policies.

The attack came after disclosure of Anglo-French agreement on the necessity of preventing the landing of further volunteers—especially Italians—in warring Spain. British and French representatives discussed the possibility of using warships to halt troop transports to Spain, but postponed any definite decision.

They agreed the machinery of the International Nonintervention Committee should be tried out first and the problem of withdrawing volunteers, which they pointed out was separate from the Neutrality Committee's "already accomplished" control plan, was for future consideration.

Government Taunted.

"I'd rather have Italy's anger than Italy's contempt," said the elder statesman. He taunted the government for its efforts to avoid a break with Mussolini over the nonintervention crisis.

Viscount Cranborne, substituting for Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, his chief, faced the parliamentary fire and steadfastly insisted it was impossible "beforehand" to announce what would be done even if the Spanish insurgents won with the aid of Italian troops.

Cranborne's refusal, in the face of persistent questioning, to protest to the League of Nations against Italian executions in Addis Ababa or

Dean Raises New Doubt on Court Change

Senators Are Impressed by Columbia Law Head's Stand.

Roosevelt's Backer, He Deserts President on Judiciary.

By Robert C. Albright.

Testimony of a single witness—a Columbia University law dean—apparently raised new doubts in the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday as to the wisdom of the President's court plan.

The witness was slight, gray-visaged Young B. Smith, head of the Columbia faculty of law and a supporter of the President in the last two elections.

A new bevy of constitutional amendment proposals followed his testimony against the plan, and at least two supposed friends of the court bill voiced sympathy with his views.

Dean Smith brought a constitutional amendment of his own before the committee—one that would require justices to retire at a specified age, 70 or 75, with retirements possibly spread over a period of years.

Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, non-committal on the court plan but hitherto leaning toward it, said he would vote for such an amendment any time it was offered in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, believed a supporter of the President's court bill, said he was "impressed" by Smith's testimony, and would back his amendment if it is found possible for Congress to submit amendments directly to State ratifying conventions.

Amendment Proposed.

Neither Logan nor Hatch said he would support the amendment as a complete substitute for the President's plan although Hatch saw the possibility that by the State convention method an amendment might be adopted before protracted consideration of the Administration proposal could be concluded.

Later the New Mexico Senator proposed an amendment to the court bill which would limit tenure of the proposed six new justices appointed under its terms to one-year service on the bench. Hatch indicated he had some support for his plan to make the new judiciary appointments "temporary."

Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, another member of the Judiciary Committee and bitter opponent of the court plan, early in the controversy had proposed a constitutional amendment fixing a retirement age for justices.

Draft To Be Prepared.

On conclusion of yesterday's hearings, Burke invited Dean Smith to submit a draft of his own similar court retirement amendment. Smith said he would have the Columbia University drafting service prepare such an amendment.

Under legislation recently enacted by Congress, justices voluntarily may retire with full pay at 70, but there is nothing compulsory about the provision. As life tenure is guaranteed in the Constitution, only an amendment could force retirement.

"Such an amendment," said Dean Smith, "would more surely correct the present situation than would the pending proposal, and would avoid its objectionable features. It would provide the immediate relief that is needed, and at the same time establish a precedent against Congress and the Executive, without an amendment, adding new justices to the court because they disagree with its decisions."

The Columbia law dean was one of the three witnesses appearing before the committee yesterday, but his testimony took up the better part of the day.

Earlier, Fred Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange, called the President's plan "an attempt to intimidate and coerce the Supreme Court" and declared it threatened "the overthrow of our constitutional form of government."

Religious Issue Raised.

Last witness to testify was Dr. Gould Wickey, of this city, general secretary of both the Council of Church Boards of Education and the National Conference of Church-Related Colleges.

Dr. Wickey said a Supreme Court remodeled as the President proposes would become "a dangerous institution," and added:

"We fear the President's proposal because we see that through it an enthroned radicalism could enact laws of educational slavery and religious intolerance."

Following Wickey's testimony, elaborating the religious issue injected at Wednesday's hearings, the committee voted to recess until next Tuesday, when the Senate opposition will present new witness. Burke said if all opposition wit-

All Bodies Hurled To Front of Plane

Bureau of Air Commerce to Start Investigation of Air Disaster.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 25.—A giant white Transcontinental Airways skyliner crashed nose first tonight about 8 miles south of Pittsburgh, killing its crew of three and ten passengers.

Robert McWilliams, a Washington, Pa., taxicab operator, said he saw the liner about 6:45 p.m. cruising slowly, headed toward the Pittsburgh Airport, its engines laboring.

"The pilot kept dropping gradually toward the end of a narrow valley. He seemed to try to make a turn.

"Suddenly the front of the ship just dropped straight down 100 yards from me. There was a loud noise, then silence.

"There was no fire. When I got there all the passengers seemed jammed into the front of the ship. The back part wasn't damaged.

"We began pulling out the bodies. We listened to the hearts, but none was beating."

List of Passengers.

The passengers, announced by T. W. A. officials at Kansas City: E. J. Fleming, Standard Oil Co., Kansas City; C. R. Lewers, jr., Standard Oil Co., Kansas City; Hasan Haxli, Arco, Ill.; Miss M. Black, New York; Miss F. Reed, New York; Earl G. Neill, St. Paul, Minn; Frederick D. Lehman, Harrisburg, Pa.; Miss Pauline Trask, Germantown, Pa.; John F. Hermann, Lincoln, Ill.; E. Brazelton, Elmhurst, Ill. Crew members: F. L. Bohnet, Newark, N. J., chief pilot; H. E. Warwick, Newark, copilot; Miss Doris C. Hammons, Elk City, Okla., hostess.

The tragedy occurred in a small valley in upper St. Clair Township, on the fringe of Mount Lebanon and 8 miles from downtown Pittsburgh.

Less than a year ago 11 persons died in a mountain top crash 40 miles to the southeast and last September 5 10 were killed in a sightseeing plane about 10 miles away.

Visibility Was Good.

Visibility was good at the time of the crash, although a few hours earlier a heavy smoke and fog had enveloped most of the Pittsburgh area.

Capt. A. M. Wilkins, who was piloting flight No. 6 from Pittsburgh eastward to Newark, reported he, too, saw the crash.

His stateent follows:

"About ten miles west of Pittsburgh airport, while flying at 2,000 feet, I sighted an airplane flying at approximately 1,700 feet in level flight and dead ahead of us about one mile, and headed in the same direction toward the Pittsburgh airport.

"When I spotted him I immediately slowed up as we were overtaking him rapidly. When within a half-mile of the plane it looked as though he were starting to make a left turn. The nose of the plane pointed vertically downward. When he was within about 50 feet of the ground I looked away, but First Officer Williams (L. M. Williams, copilot on Wilkins' plane) saw the actual impact. Mr. Williams says the ship struck the ground in full vertical position.

"I proceeded to Pittsburgh and landed there.

"The actual base of the clouds was 3,000 feet above sea level as I flew in sight of the ground from 10 miles west of the Ohio river to Pittsburgh. The visibility was also good, ranging from five to ten miles from my plane. There was no snow or rain to decrease visibility."

20 Minutes Late.

Coroner W. J. Macgregor, of Allegheny County, personally took charge of an investigation, while at Washington the Bureau of Air Commerce of the Commerce Department said there would be an official "early investigation."

The airliner left Newark at 3:25 p. m., and made its regular stop shortly afterward at Camden airport.

Three persons were reported to have left the ship at Camden, a Mrs. E. Fritz, Miss E. Fritz and Mr. H. Fritz.

The ship was due in Pittsburgh at 6:25 and was about 20 minutes late at the time it crashed. There

Nazi Diplomats 'Snub' Mass in Sistine Chapel

Sudden 'Boycott' Strengthens Belief Hitler May Break With Vatican.

By the United Press.

Vatican City, March 25.—German diplomats today "boycotted" Holy Thursday mass in Sistine Chapel, giving rise to reports that Adolf Hitler's government may break off diplomatic relations with the Vatican.

The entire German delegation to the Holy See refused to attend the mass, regularly attended by all foreign statesmen accredited to the Vatican, and it was reported that the Nazi representatives acted on instructions from Berlin.

It was reported that the Germans also would boycott the Easter mass, also which Pope Pius XI will make his first public appearance since he was forced to bed by illness early in December.

The Pontiff in a papal letter read from the pulpits of all Catholic churches in Germany last Tuesday, charged the Nazi government with persecuting the church and with violation of its 1933 concordat with the Holy See.

The reports of an impending diplomatic break were emphasized when the German Embassy refused to say whether it would be represented at Sunday's Easter mass.

The German Ambassador, however, remained in Vatican City.

The German "snub" had not been anticipated.

Weight was added to reports of the growing schism when dispatches said the German foreign office's mouthpiece, The Diplomatic-Political Correspondence, denounced Pope Pius XI's recent encyclical as "shocking."

The encyclical, issued last Thursday, called the Nazi church policy "unchristian."

The Diplomatic-Political Correspondence answered tonight that the Pope issued the letter "in a way calculated to cause surprise and create a one-sided impression that one of the parties concerned alone was responsible for the difficulties."

Nye Demands Spanish 'Allies' Arms Embargo

State Department Is Asked to Determine Neutrality Policy at Once.

By Sidney Olson.

Raising in the Senate at last an issue that has been burning in the Nation's editorial pages for weeks, Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, yesterday asked the State Department to rule on an American embargo on shipment of arms to outside countries participating in the Spanish civil war.

Nye said:

"There is justification for institution of our neutrality policy right now against countries intervening in the Spanish war.

"I hope this resolution will fetch from the State Department information regarding the desirability of an arms embargo on shipments hereafter to such countries as Italy."

"What Is War Now?"

"When does a state of war exist now? No longer do nations declare war. While, you will recall, we have acted specifically against arms shipments to both sides in the Spanish civil war, we have been continuing trade with nations taking an aggressive part in that civil war.

"The President could proclaim a state of war to exist and could then invoke an embargo on arms shipments to such countries."

Asked if he did not think determination of aggressors in the Spanish war would constitute an unfriendly act in the light of declarations on all sides by these nations that they are not taking official part in the Spanish strife, Nye said:

"No, it would be an act of peace on our part. This course would be in keeping with world peace moves.

"The more displeasure voiced in the world against the activities of such countries, the more quickly will come acknowledgment by the

Auto Strikers Quit Plants to Reopen Parley

Leaders Talk for Hours to Get Reluctant Workers to Leave Factories.

On the Labor Front.

Representatives of the Chrysler factories and their workers resumed negotiations following the evacuation of the plants of thousands of sit-down strikers.

Labor Department figures showed more than three times as many workmen out on strike in January, 1937, than in the corresponding month a year ago.

Negotiations Resumed.

By the Associated Press.

Lansing, Mich., March 25.—Moving swiftly after thousands of sit-down strikers paraded from Chrysler automobile plants in Detroit, Gov. Frank Murphy called leaders of the corporation and its striking workers together again tonight seeking settlement of their dispute.

After a two-hour session the conference recessed until 9 a. m. Tomorrow. Gov. Murphy said the meeting had been "very satisfactory."

Terms of last night's truce which ended an 18-day sit-down in the Chrysler factories pledged both sides, Murphy said, to "see the collective bargaining controversy through to a finish."

The United Automobile Workers of America, claiming 59,000 members in Chrysler plants, called the strike March 8 after Chrysler executives refused their demand for exclusive bargaining rights.

Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the corporation's board, and John L. Lewis, whose Committee for Industrial Organization is supporting the U. A. W. A. strikes, came to Lansing yesterday at Murphy's invitation. Two conferences produced the truce ending the sit-down phase of the strike; then they adjourned to await evacuation of the plants.

Martin Takes Message.

Homer Martin, union president, and other officials sped over ice-covered highways to carry the truce terms to the strikers for approval.

Not until the union chiefs literally had talked themselves hoarse did the strikers agree to leave the plants without a company concession on the issue of sole recognition.

For 12 hours, Martin, Richard T. Frankensteen, organization director, and other U. A. W. A. officials traveled from plant to plant in a

Three Hostesses Drink Toast To Fourth Who Died in Crash

Farmer Asserts Ship Fell 500 Feet and Turned Over Three Times; Scene of Horror Sickened Rescuers, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., March 25.—Miss Doris C. Hammons, hostess aboard the T. W. A. plane which crashed today at Pittsburgh, entered the service in December 1935 as one of the first air hostesses.

Three other hostesses with whom she lived at 77 South Munn avenue, East Orange, said her home was in Leedy, Okla. She was on the regular Newark-Chicago run, and had left her apartment here at 2 o'clock today.

Miss Hammons was 26, and a blonde.

Her three companions listended to their radio in the hope they might hear that Miss Hammons had survived the crash. They imagined her another Nellie Granger, the T. W. A. hostess who survived the "Sun Racer" crash near Uniontown, Pa., last year.

Then when the official word of her death came, they poured four glasses of wine, drank three and smashed all four on a table in a solemn toast to the classmate who had "gone west."

"Remember, we are all trained nurses and have been taught to bear up under these things," one of the young women said. But the eyes of another were red-rimmed.

They would not permit use of their names "because we all have to fly tomorrow and some passengers might be superstitious."

Miss Hammons was athletic, "loved to swim," and was "an all-around loveable girl," they said.

She had planned to spend a two weeks' vacation at her Oklahoma home next month. Graduated from high school there, she became a nurse at Tisdale Hospital, Elk City.

Pittsburgh, March 25.—Euclid Bourguignon, 26-year-old farmer, first on the scene where a T. W. A. airliner crashed tonight, said the huge white transport turned end over end three times, then nosed down and fell 500 feet. He said the twin motors were still running.

Bourguignon saw the ship was in difficulty as he trudged homeward, leading the family cow.

"The plane came out of the west, over a hill, flying very low," he said.

"The plane made as though to land on a hill near my house, but there were trees in the way and it went back up in the air.

"I thought sure it was going to hit our house. The plane shot up in the air with the motors running, then it turned end over end three times and then nosed down and crashed.

"I guess it fell about 500 feet straight down.

"I went down and started dragging out bodies. I was the first one

Uproar Follows 7 Convictions In Cafe Racket

Defendants Dragged From N. Y. Court After Wild Weeping, Cursing.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 25.—In one of the wildest scenes ever witnessed in a New York courtroom, a supreme court jury tonight convicted seven men of a $2,000,000-a-year restaurant "shake-down" racket.

Two defendants wept and shouted curses at the court, the prosecutor and the jury.

'Give me the firing squad!" screamed Aladar Retek, a union official, hysterically. "I'm a murderer, a killer! I'm everything!

"I've got a dirty deal! This isn't right, your honor! It isn't just! It isn't fair! I'm no racketeer!"

John J. Williams, another union official, had to be taken from the court by force, he became so hysterical. He was unable to return to give his record.

From the time the jury started down the list of defendants, declaring them all guilty of every count against them, Williams began muttering curses which could be heard across the crowded courtroom.

Finally, when Justice Philip J. McCook started to thank the jury for its services, he jumped up and cried:

"Don't bother about it. They're all rats."

The other defendants heard the verdict calmly. They were Abraham Cohen, Harry A. Vogelstein, of the Metropolitan Restaurant and Cafeteria Association, and Paul N. Coulcher, union official.

All seven were found guilty on all of more than 20 counts, making each liable to maximum sentences of 213 to 385½ years.

Traffic Post Remains Unfilled; 36th Victim of Accidents Dies

By Howard F. Wentworth.

(Winner of first prize in the Nation-wide C. I. T. Safety Contest with his 1936 series appearing in The Post.)

Washington's muddled administrative traffic problem continued to arouse speculation last night as Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, prepared to announce a successor to Inspector Benjamin A. Lamb, recently transferred traffic supervisor.

And yesterday the city recorded its thirty-sixth accident fatality for the year—the first in 15 days.

Alarmed at the present situation and determined to install a permanent traffic head, Maj. Brown is delaying his decision only until Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen returns from out of town.

With several police officials under consideration for the post, the name of Capt. Milton D. Smith, traffic division commander, was added to the growing list of candidates yesterday.

Meanwhile, a young woman driving an expensive-make automobile with "diplomatic" license plates, and the former Governor of a Southern State risked their lives—and the lives of others on Washington streets yesterday, adding danger hazards to congested, midtown traffic.

Both, however, escaped punishment for their heedless acts—one by "diplomatic immunity" and the other by learning a lesson in safety rules.

Cruising across Taft Bridge on its daily tour of traffic arteries, the new safety patrol car was overtaken by the young woman in her speeding coupe. Flashing past at high speed, she was paced to the end of the bridge at nearly 50 miles an hour.

Policeman George M. Patton, the "safety officer," signaled for the woman to stop. But she smiled in his direction and continued on. Again he drew abreast of her car and ordered her to stop. This time,

Roosevelt Signs U.S. Acceptance of Mellon Art Gift

Andrew Mellon's $50,000,000 gift of art treasures was formally accepted by the United States Government yesterday, when President Roosevelt signed a congressional resolution of acceptance at Warm Springs, Ga.

Mellon's gift includes the collection itself, which has been valued at as high as $50,000,000 and a $10,000,000 building to house it.

The Pittsburgh financier has also announced plans to set up a $5,000,000 endowment fund to maintain the institution.

Workers Place Smudge Pots, Blockade Roads As Snow Flurries Menace Cherry Blossoms

Fighting to save the bud-filled Japanese cherry trees around the Tidal Basin from threatened cold and snow, parks workmen early last night prepared to light hundreds of smudge pots.

The Basin roadways in West Potomac Park were blockaded at 6 p. m. Three hundred street warning-torches and 100 huge drums were set out under the trees and in the roads while anxious officials eyed thermometers. Orders were to light the smudge pots when the mercury dropped to 38 degrees.

Earlier the Weather Bureau had predicted a sudden cold wave, possibly accompanied by snow flurries, which would send the temperature down to 26 degrees by 6 a. m. today.

At midnight, the official recording was 40, 30 degrees below the city's high reading of 70 at 2 p. m.

The office of National Capital Parks decided upon the smudge precaution, common in the citrus fruit groves of Florida but unusual in the Capital, immediately upon receiving the bureau warning.

Frank T. Gartside, assistant superintendent, said arrangements had been made to borrow the street torches from the Capital Transit Co. and other utilities. They were to be placed beneath the trees, while the huge wood-burning drums were to be distributed along the roads that rim the Tidal Basin.

David E. Saunders, parks horticulturist, was in charge of the operations, with more than 30 men following his orders. The Metropolitan and Park Police departments were notified in advance so that traffic could be rerouted. Fire engines stood by.

As Gartside explained, the smudges would protect the trees not by heat but by the dense smoke screen, which has the effect of dissipating moisture in the nearly ripe buds. More than 700 Japanese cherry trees of the single blossom variety fringe the Tidal Basin.

Earlier a special meeting of the Cherry Blossom Festival committee, called to set a definite date for Washington's Cherry Blossom Fete, decided it will be held between April 2 and 8.

However, the committee decided no festival will be held if the freezing weather damages the buds so that the blossoms cannot attain their beauty of former years.

"But we are confident the trees will come through the freeze all right," explained Charles J. Columbus, secretary of the committee. "People will come from all over the country to attend the festival and we do not intend to have them disappointed in the cherry trees. We will stage a festival with blossoms or no festival at all."

Heralding the promised cold spell, a windstorm that sent hats flying came out of the Southwest yesterday afternoon.

The forecast for today was fair and colder.

Miss Perkins' Strike Figures Alarm Congress

Lewis Called Foe of 'True' Labor Movement; Dies Completes Bill.

By William V. Nessly.

While members of Congress yesterday gave fresh manifestations of concern over sit-down and other strikes gripping public attention, the Labor Department was compiling freshly received figures that emphasized the increase in number and extent of labor disturbances marking the early months of 1937.

Suggestions were heard in House and Senate that President Roosevelt take a firm stand on "increasing dangers of the labor situation," that Secretary of Labor Perkins be "more cautious" lest she "incite" work stoppages, and that John L. Lewis had injured the "true labor movement" by using the sit-down technique.

In addition, Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, completed work on a bill that would outlaw sit-down strikes as violations of the antitrust laws.

Increase Over 1936.

Meanwhile preliminary figures of the Bureau of Labor statistics disclosed that more than 3½ times as many workers were out of employment on account of strikes in January of this year than in the opening month of 1936. The total was the largest in any single month since the six-day walkout of 400,000 bituminous miners in September, 1935.

The number out of work in February because of strikes was more than two and one-half times as great as the number in February last year, the preliminary figures showed.

While March figures from over the country will not be available until next month, the outbreak of sit-downs in various cities and in various industries and occupations threatens to send totals for the month to high levels.

G. M., Coast Strikes Cited.

Reports in the hands of the Labor Department yesterday, subject to revision, probably upward, showed 160 strikes beginning in January this year, while 260 were in progress in the course of the month. Strikes reported in January, 1936, totaled 249. The number of workers involved in the first 1937 month was 210,000, as compared with 58,609 in the corresponding period a year ago. The man-days of work lost through the strikes was 2,700,000, more than four times the 632,811 man-days for January, 1935.

The General Motors and West Coast shipping strikes were largely responsible for the huge totals this year.

February's record is little less impressive. The month brought 230 new strikes, with 340 in progress at some time during the 28-day period.

Copeland Urges Action.

These totals compared with 148 new strikes in February, 1936, and 249 in progress in the course of the month. Workers involved in the tie-ups this year, in the second month, numbered 225,000, contrasted with 89,691 in the corresponding period of 1935. Due to settlement of the shipping and auto strikes before the month ended, the number of man-days of work lost declined to 1,485,000 this year, but still was almost twice as great as the 747,963 man-days lost in the previous February.

On Capitol Hill Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, said "it is up to the President to formulate a strong national policy with respect to the increasing dangers of the labor situation." He said "something must be done shortly to prevent spread of these sit-down strikes."

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, expressed hope that out of an expected conference between President Roosevelt and Congress leaders Saturday there may come a Presidential expression concerning sit-down strikes.

Rich Warns Congress.

"There is nothing of greater importance to the Nation at the present time than a solution of the situation," he told the Senate.

Representative Rich, Pennsylvania Republican, urged the Congressional chieftains to "remember their oaths require them to uphold law and order," when they meet with the President.

Representative McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, charged Secretary Perkins had made "inciting remarks" regarding the sit-down method of striking. He said the Secretary had been quoted as saying the legality or illegality of that method had never been determined, and that she had in effect placed the sit-down stoppages in the same category with picketing.

"I differ with the lady if she made that statement," McCormack said. "If she did not make the statement she should immediately repudiate it. There is a difference between a state of mind in defiance of the law and a state of mind in compliance and conformity with the law."

"Reluctantly and hesitatingly," he said, "the Labor Department under her leadership has not as yet earned my confidence."

Dies' bill to outlaw the sit-down strikes would provide penalties up to one year in prison or fines not exceeding $5,000.

"The Supreme Court has held that Congress cannot prevent movement of lawful goods in interstate commerce," he said, "so why should a group of men like sit-down strikers be permitted to hold up such movements of goods, as they obviously are doing?"

Dies also is author of a resolution for an investigation of the strikes, and the Rules Committee plans a hearing on it next week.

Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, denounced the sit-down method and criticized John L. Lewis for adopting it.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, speaking for legislation to stabilize the value of the dollar, laid the strikes to low wages.

Senator William E. Borah, Idaho Republican, asked a Senate investigation of the "failure" of the Chicago Great Western Railroad to "abide by the decisions of the Railroad Adjustment Board." His resolution said workers on the road are threatening to strike because of refusal of road officials to pay damages of $60,000 assessed against the road in favor of workers.

Believes Working Man Has Been Exploited Long Enough and Something Should Be Done About It; Plays Handball.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

His opponent ran on three tickets—the Republican, the Coughlin Royal Oak and the Townsend—but one was good enough to give 34-year-old Robert Gray Allen (Democrat) Greensboro, Pa., his first fling in Congress.

Handsome, husky, and looking very much like your best friend's football-playing brother, Pennsylvania's second youngest Representative can turn into an eloquent speaker on the floor, or off, when labor and unemployment problems come up for discussion.

He believes labor has been exploited long enough; that it's high time Congress stepped in with effective legislation in favor of both the wage-earner and the man without a job.

"Workers must have better pay and shorter hours," he contends. "As for people without employment—well, where private industry can't supply enough jobs to go around, it should be taxed so the government can provide work and wages for the forgotten man."

Allen approves of the President's proposed change in the Supreme Court as "a first and temporary step," but is convinced that a "clarifying Constitutional amendment should accompany it."

During his school days at Phillips Academy and his college days at Harvard, he developed an absorbing interest in economics and history. Continued his study of the former first-hand and witnessed some of the latter in the making when he went into a manufacturing concern soon after his academic education was finished.

Later, he had a close-up view of the New Deal being dealt when he became district administrator of the WPA. He is married and has two children—Katherine H., 10, and Robert Gray, jr., 5. Collects Currier and Ives prints and early American furniture. Spends much of his spare time "which isn't much at that" playing handball in the House gymnasium. Believes he'll be good at it if Congress stays in session all summer.

Two Roosevelt Farm Measures Nearing Action

Wheat Crop Insurance Bill Ready for Senate, Tenant Bill Next on List.

By Russell Smith.

As President Roosevelt prepared to return to Washington, two of the three major pieces of farm legislation he has requested at this session of Congress were advanced yesterday to a point where action by the Senate on one is expected this week, and by the House on the other the following week.

On motion of Senator McNary (Republican), of Oregon, the Senate agreed to vote on the $100,000,000 wheat crop insurance bill of Senator Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, next week, and a meeting of the House Agriculture Committee was set for Tuesday, at which time it is hoped the bill will be put in shape for an early report to the House.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, co-author with Representative Jones (Democrat), of Texas, of the pending tenant bill, also announced during the day a Senate Agriculture sub-committee will begin study of that bill Monday.

Prospects thus are for enactment of the crop insurance and tenant bills with a minimum of delay, despite the constitutional issues which have been raised as to each, while the third measure in the farm legislative program for the session—the ever-normal granary bill—is stalled apparently pending action on the President's judiciary revision suggestions.

Dart Aimed at Hughes.

A committee of farm leaders here drafting their version of the granary bill apparently is unable to proceed with recommendations for production control—the all-important fourth step in Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's four-step plan, pending determination of the court plan's fate.

Pope, Jones and Bankhead in a conference yesterday agreed to press both bills to early passage, while during the day Pope and Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, proposed that the Supreme Court give Congress an advisory opinion on constitutionality of the crop insurance measure.

Schwellenbach made his remarks the occasion for a slap at Chief Justice Hughes' letter to Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, relative to the President's court plan.

"In view of the fact that we received this week from the Chief Justice an advisory opinion on a matter now before Congress, I was wondering if it would not be proper for us now to ask for an advisory opinion on a matter which we actually have before us," he said.

Pope indorsed this view in the course of a speech in which he confessed to doubts as to constitutionality of his bill in the light of the Supreme Court's Hoosac Mills case ruling that agriculture is a local matter. He nevertheless urged its passage.

May Go to Floor.

Amendment of the farm tenant bill to conform more nearly to recommendations of the President's commission on that subject was indicated by Senator Bankhead when he said after the conference with Pope and Jones that he sees no necessity for a new bill, but added that he expected several amendments, "a number of which I shall offer myself."

At its meeting Tuesday, the House committee is expected to settle the controversial tenant bill clause as to the period in which a farm lessee under the plan can obtain title to the land. This issue, which has split the committee almost evenly into angry blocs, may be carried to the House floor. At present, prospects are that the committee will provide a lessee may obtain this title when he pays 50 per cent of the purchase price, regardless of the period of time in which he pays that sum.

Other questions which are before the committee are the period for which leases are to be made and the right of the prospective tenant to select the farm he desires rather than to be restricted to an area chosen by the Government. It is likely the committee will specify in the bill that the former method be employed.

Navy Proposes Training 40,000 For Emergency

Ten-Year Program Calls for Drilling Merchant Marine Force.

Plans for training 5,000 officers and 35,000 men in the merchant marine for war-time use on naval auxiliary vessels were disclosed yesterday by the Navy Department.

The program, which has been quitely advocated by the Navy since the naval reserve act was passed in 1925, would be spread over a period of ten years. Capt. W. O. Spears, of the Navy's reserve training section, said last night. An "experimental beginning" probably will be made this year, however, depending on Congressional appropriation.

The 1938 naval appropriations bill, now in conference between House and Senate, probably will provide for a start. The House authorized training for 100 officers and the Senate approved funds for training 100 officers and 120 men. The Navy Department had asked for funds to give two weeks' training to 400 officers and 500 men at a cost of $103,200.

The full program, with annual cost of more than $3,000,000, would build up, for the first time, a merchant marine reserve adequate to man essential vessels in war-time emergency.

The record of the World War, Capt. Spears said, shows the necessity for naval training for merchant marine personnel.

"In case of mobilization at this time, we would be caught with a merchant marine of untrained and undisciplined personnel. * * * There has been no great improvement in the merchant marine over the World War conditions. * * * Every other maritime nation in the world makes great efforts to build up a trained and disciplined merchant marine personnel."

The Navy program would assign officers to two weeks' active duty on warships and give the enlisted men a training course on the receiving ship Seattle at the New York Navy Yard. The trained men would return to their ships, Capt. Spears explained, to serve as the nucleus in expanding training on the 227 merchant ships flying the Naval Reserve flag.

House Is Upset When 2 From Illinois Clash

Reps. Sabath and Church Cause Commotion by Row Over Fee.

By the United Press.

A quarrel between two Illinois Representatives, Adolph Sabath, Democrat, and Ralph Church, Republican, caused such a commotion in the House yesterday leaders were forced to step in with an adjournment motion, but Sabath promised to renew the fight when the chamber reconvenes Monday.

The quarrel concerned Sabath's investigation of real estate bondholders' protective committees, an inquiry which has been in progress for several years and for which $110,000 has been appropriated.

Church charged that Sabath's law firm had asked for a fee of $6,400 from private interests for activities connected with the inquiry. He described the inquiry as "disgraceful."

Sabath replied that the law firm was involved in the case before he joined it, and that the firm never received the fee. He accused Church of speaking for the "interests" he was seeking to investigate.

As Church attempted to read a letter which he claimed had a bearing on his charges, Majority Leader Sam Rayburn moved adjournment, with Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, adding to the confusion by demanding a roll call.

Earlier the House passed a bill appropriating $123,099,000 for the expenses of the State, Justice, Commerce and Labor departments in 1938, and approved a Senate resolution clearing the way for Joseph P. Kennedy to accept the chairmanship of the Federal Maritime Commission.

Roosevelt Ends Vacation; Arrives Here Tomorrow

Warm Springs, Ga., March 25 (A.P.).—President Roosevelt brought his two-week vacation virtually to a close today with a 50-mile motor trip which took him to his farm, to a rural resettlement project, and to a Civilian Conservation Corps camp.

He will leave tomorrow afternoon for Washington, arriving there late Saturday morning. He is expected to confer with Congressional leaders over the week-end on a number of subjects, including sit-down strikes.

After a morning swim in the private pool here, the Chief Executive visited his 2,800-acre cattle farm to leave final orders with the superintendent, Otis Moore, before returning to the National Capital.

From there, the procession moved on to the Pine Mountain valley project, and thence the CCC camp at nearby Chipley.

Socialists to Meet Over Third Party

Chicago, March 25 (A.P.).—The Socialist Party in a special national convention opening tomorrow will decide whether it should join a Farmer-Labor Third Party movement, leaders predicted today.

Executive Secretary Roy E. Burt said "the convention will consider the whole subject of independent political action on the part of workers and outline the Socialist Party's attitude toward a Farmer-Labor Party."

3 Arrests Reveal Gold Theft Of $1,000,000 From Rich Mine

Secret Service Men Believe Amazing South Dakota Case Has Been Cleared Up; Alleged Brains of Gang Hunted.

Secret Service headquarters here yesterday believed it had cleared up one of the strangest cases in its history with the arrest of three miners in Denver, charged with robbing the fabulously rich Homestake Mine of $1,000,000 in gold.

However, the leaders of the gang, named as Parks DuPont, a French soldier of fortune, was still being sought. Agents were looking for him in San Francisco. He was said by F. J. Wilson, head of the Secret Service, to be wanted on a serious charge elsewhere. The Treasury wants him for violation of the "gold act."

Wilson related a story which sounded like fiction when he described a three-year hunt for thieves suspected of robbing the Homestake Mine in the Black Hills of South Dakota. The Homestake, owned by William Randolph Hearst interests, produces more than $7,000,000 annually.

Tracing the story backward from the arrest of the three miners in Denver, he said the men had been caught because gold "amalgam"—a crudely refined gold—which they had sold to a Denver assayer, was suspected of being stolen.

Assayer Gives Clew.

He said W. L. Piers, a licensed assayer in Denver, reported he had purchased various lots of gold from the miners in amounts of $100 to $1,000, with the total reaching $5,000. The sellers alleged they had purchased their gold from the owner of a claim known as the Mount Cherrystone Mine, in the heart of the Black Hills, famous in history as the old stamping ground of Buffalo Bill and other frontiersmen.

They filed reports, under the new law, stating the owner of the mine was one Henry Widerholt. Suspecting thievery, secret service men investigated and found there was no one by that name in the vicinity of Lead, S. Dak., where they stated the mine was located. A man named Louis Widerholt, an old prospector of good reputation, was found. He owned a mine called the Monte Cristo, at Lead.

Louis Widerholt told agents that no gold of any consequence had been mined from the Monte Cristo for years. This evidence tended to confirm the belief that the gold being sold in Denver was stolen, so the investigation was pressed.

Going over checks issued by the assayer, Piers, in payment for gold amalgam, agents discovered that of ten checks issued, the first three were indorsed "Henry Widerholt." The next three were also indorsed by "Henry Widerholt," but also contained a second indorsement with the name Parks DuPont. Handwriting experts established that Henry Widerholt and Parks DuPont were the same person, with the DuPont signature only slightly disguised.

Ex-Employes Arrested.

Further investigation developed, Wilson said, that certain former employes of the Homestake Mine were close friends of DuPont. These friends were identified, and were watched as members of the conspiracy. It was they who were arrested yesterday. Their names, according to the Associated Press, are: Robert E. Lee, Arthur O. Flavin and Richard Aimone. The first two pleaded not guilty, the third guilty to grand larceny charges.

Stories were flying wildly as to where the men got the gold, Wilson said. He indicated he was convinced most of the gold came from the Homestake Mine. He added, however, that the exact amount the suspected men are said to have stolen over a course of several years, is not known and probably never will be known.

One story he cited, which the Secret Service investigated in 1934, was that $1,000,000 worth of ore had been dug out of the Homestake by tunneling under the main shafts. The ore was then cached in the mountains, he said the story went, and kept in hiding for future use.

A fictional angle of this legend was that hi-jackers planned to steal the cached ore and run it across the border into Mexico, later importing it into the United States for sale to the mint as Mexican gold. Wilson said that to date none of his agents had found the cache. He added that that did not necessarily mean there was no such cache.

"Bad Men" Watched.

Half a dozen "bad men" who frequented Bad Lands towns were closely shadowed, Wilson said, and their records checked in police departments. One by one they were arrested on old charges ranging from robbing the mails to kidnaping, and sent to Federal prisons, most of them to Leavenworth. This program broke up the rumored attempt to steal the $1,000,000 cache. Two of those sentenced to Leavenworth were named as Glenn Cochrane and Maynard Eakers, who received 11 years on old kidnaping charges.

Secret Service agents were questioning Harry D. Williams in Billings, Mont., in connection with the plot last night. Another man held for questioning was Ion L. Smith, arrested in Denver. He is a 60-year-old miner. Wilson said his department had no previous records on Williams and Smith.

In Denver Rowland K. Goddard, district chief of the Secret Service, said the hunted fugitive, DuPont, is a former member of the French Foreign Legion and a former ship officer. He was described by Goddard as the "brains" of the plot.

Homestake Mine officials have denied that any such amount as $1,000,000 has been stolen from their mine. In contradiction to this, there have been insistent rumors, Wilson said, that the Homestake was being systematically "high-graded" for years—the mining vernacular for stealing ore. The mine employs 2,000 men.

One tale of the first discovery of the "high-grading" said a watchman found a hand reaching through a hole on the floor for amalgam on a table.

Pastor Questioned After Bruised Body Of Girl Is Found

Greensburg, Pa., March 25 (AP).—Medical science and officers of the law attempted tonight to clear the mystery surrounding the death of 27-year-old Lillian Edna Householder, whose bruised body was found in a secluded cabin near Laurelville.

The nearly nude body of the former cabaret entertainer was discovered yesterday 14 miles from Greensburg, but 24 hours later the cause of her death remained unsolved.

Her husband, J. Carl Householder, a photographer at Medina, Ohio, and her father, John Clevenger, of Tanneryville, Pa., were unable to give any reasons for her death.

Coroner McMurray and State police said today they were questioning a man they called the Rev. Edward A. Haley, formerly an assistant pastor at Canton, Ohio, who appeared at the cabin while police were investigating the death. McMurray said he explained Mrs. Householder had been doing secretarial work for him.

Admiral Protests Midshipmen Title, Singers' Uniforms

A formal protest against the use of midshipmen's uniforms and use of the name "midshipmen," directed against a group of singers recently appearing in a Washington Hotel, was on its way to the Navy Department last night. The protest was filed by Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the Annapolis Academy, but had not been received by Navy officials last night.

The singers usually wear uniforms similar to midshipmen's, but without the words "U. S. Navy" or official buttons bearing the seal of the Navy.

Several Navay officers who live at the hotel had heard the group but made no comment on the title or uniforms.

9 of 20 Bus Dead Too Badly Burned For Identification

Salem, Ill., March 25 (AP).—Their bodies burned beyond recognition, nine persons remained unidentified tonight of the 20 members of a roller-skating troupe who rode to death in a bus near here yesterday.

"I doubt if very many more will be identified," said Mayor Omar McMackin, of Salem, owner of the mortuary where 15 of the bodies were taken.

Penitents Tread Rocky Trail, Flog Selves in Easter Ritual

By the Associated Press.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., March 25. Cactus-crowned "Cristos," burdened with the grief of 2,000 years, will tread rocky, blood-spattered trails to modern Calvaries in the Southwest's mountains tomorrow.

The reedy wail of the "pito" the ceaseless thud-thud of sharp yucca fiber whips slicing into soft flesh and the low moaning of human sorrow will rise above the whispering of thin cold wind through the mesquite.

All day and into the night, these somber processions will wind, to the summit of "El Calvario," and there the break of dawn will find the Cristo, lashed to the cross he has borne to the hilltop.

Thus will "Los Hermanos de Sangre Cristo," the Spanish-American penitents, re-enact the passion of Jesus Christ and prove themselves worthy of their Savior's suffering.

Led by the "Hermano mayor," or elder brother, the members gather secretly in their adobe "Morada" Chapel. Before a black-clad figure of the Christ, the brothers prostrate themselves to receive the ceremonial incisions on their backs.

Then the rites begin in earnest. While the piper plays an unearthly accompaniment on his reed fife, the brothers roll on beds of cactus or wield long whips.

The "Cristo," chosen by lot to enact the central role of the dread drama, shoulders his cross. Of rough-hewn timbers, it may weigh 800 pounds.

On El Calvario, a hole is ready for the cross. El Cristo lays down his burden and stretches himself upon it. With rawhide thongs or soaked hempen rope he is bound to the spreading arms.

Once the Cristo is lashed securely, the cross is lifted and dropped into the hole. For 30 minutes or more the sufferer is suspended. Then he is cut down, taken to the Morada to be soothed with unguents, and heaped with honors.

Easter Visitors Arrive in D. C. By Thousands

Poor Weather Forecast; Shrines to Be Open Late During Week-End.

The vanguard of Washington's Easter visitors began to pour in yesterday by rail, highway and air while Federal weather experts gloomily foresaw inclement holiday weather.

Although refraining from making any forecast more than 24 hours in advance, the Weather Bureau hinted that winter wraps may be desirable, if unfashionable, over the week-end.

Meantime, special trains filled with Easter sojourners, mainly school children, make frequent arrivals at Union Station and more were due today and tomorrow. They came from Pennsylvania, Virginia, New York, Maryland and more distant points.

One of the largest delegations consisted of 475 pupils of Tuscarawas County (Ohio) schools.

Good Friday services will be held in Protestant and Catholic churches today, with many cantatas scheduled for tonight.

Public schools will close today, reopening April 5. Parochial schools closed for the annual holiday last Tuesday and will resume classwork next Tuesday.

A dress rehearsal was held last night in preparation for the Schola Cantorum which will be presented in the Sylvan Theater, Washington Monument Grounds, at 7 a. m. Sunday. The 200 voices will be under the direction of Arturo Papalarco. The concert will be held in the Government Auditorium. Thirteenth street and Constitution avenue, in event of unfavorable weather.

The Monument, Lincoln Memorial, Lincoln Museum and the house in which the martyred President died will be open until 10 p. m. tomorrow, Sunday and Monday as a special convenience to visitors.

Pierce Mill in Rock Creek Park will be in operation from 1 to 4 p. m. on Easter. Boy Scouts will serve visitors as guides.

It was disclosed yesterday that Mrs. Roosevelt has invited children of the Good Samaritans' Home, 638 D street northwest, to join in egg-rolling festivities at the White House Monday. Officials said they will take almost 1,000 to the party.

Compromise Plan For Court Offered

Detroit, March 25 (AP).—Senator Prentiss M. Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, asserted today the United States Supreme Court is "a little too far removed from the people" and advocated a "compromise plan" for reorganization of the Federal judiciary.

Reporting that he disagrees "with many of the court's decisions," Brown said he had not made up his mind on a definite stand between President Roosevelt's proposal to appoint new justices to the court.

The Senator's plan, which he said has the support of nine Senators, included:

Establishment by statute of the two-thirds rule for declaring Congressional acts unconstitutional, a constitutional amendment making the two-thirds rule permanent, a provision setting the judicial retirement age at 72, and the appointment of two new justices.

Sen. Black Urges Maritime Hearings

By the Associated Press.

Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, blocked confirmation of five appointees to the Maritime Commission yesterday by demanding that the Senate send the nominations back to the Commerce Committee for "further consideration."

Chairman Copeland (Democrat), New York, of the committee, agreed to take back the names which he had reported to the floor without a dissenting vote a few minutes earlier. Black said off the floor he would seek "full and open hearings."

Senators Bone (Democrat), Washington, and Nye (Republican), North Dakota, said after a brief conference with Black that labor leaders had objected to some of the appointees on grounds that they had "adopted a consistently antiunion attitude, particularly in the recent Pacific Coast martime strikes."

$1,000 Bond Set For Bank Teller

Charles Benjamin Hagan, former teller at the National Metropolitan Bank, was ordered held on $1,000 bond for the grand jury yesterday when he appeared before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage to answer a charge of embezzling $4,300 from the bank.

Hagan pleaded not guilty to the charge, sworn out by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents. They accused him of misappropriating funds.

Hagan appeared voluntarily before Turnage when he learned of the charge, filed under the Federal banking laws. He waived a preliminary hearing and was released on bond pending grand jury action.

Sects Battle To Block U. S. School Project

Pennsylvania Groups Assert Borrowing Violates Their Religions.

Clad in the picturesque attire of their religious sects, two bewhiskered Amish, one Mennonite, and a member of the Church of the Brethren, all of the little township of East Lampeter, Pa., appeared in District Court to further their suit against the Government to prevent acceptance of a PWA contribution for a "consolidated" school building in their community.

Their religious beliefs, they said, were outraged by the thought that they were to have a donation, or a loan for the erection of a central educational plant for grade schools, when there are now ten one-room school buildings that are adequate for the town's educational needs.

It was pointed out their religion bans the borrowing of money or the acceptance of a gift. Members said the entire community was free of debt and that none of the farms in the luxurious valley were subject to any mortgage. Also there are no taxes levied since each member of the sects voluntarily contributes his share of costs. They claimed the allocation of $56,250, of which $31,000 has already been received, of PWA funds for the erection of the central school, would be in violation of their beliefs they should owe no money.

The petitioners started their suit to restrain erection of the building in the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. They met a rebuff when the Government declined to produce all its records pertaining to the loan, so yesterday it was necessary to appear in the District, where the records are kept, and subpena them. The hearing was in the nature of a deposition which will be incorporated in further hearings in Pennsylvania.

In addition to asking the courts to stop the loan, the petitioners said 84 per cent of the town was opposed to it, and they asked that the members of the school board who first sought it and then approved the award be held individually responsible for the money thus far expended for the purchase of land and construction of a foundation.

Another idea advanced for the suppression of Federal aid in the construction of the building was that the pupils would be forced to travel in a common school bus. This again violates the sects' opinions. They said they believed the school children should either walk to school or should be transported in the manner of their elders.

Furthermore, the building will be of more than one story, thus creating a fire hazard that does not meet with their approval, John Landberg, Philadelphia attorney, said. The petitioners who appeared here yesterday were Jonathan Zook and Amos S. Fisher, of the Amish religion, both of whom wer heavily bewhiskered; Harry B. Dussinger, of the Mennonites, and Adam E. Myer, of the Church of the Brethren.

They pointed out if the school's construction were to proceed, the citizens of the district would become liable for the Government loan, and would thus be in violation of one of their chief precepts, namely, that none should be indebted.

Hearings will be continued in Lancaster County next week. The legal object of the suit is to restrain the school board from spending any more of the money already received, to prevent acceptance of the additional funds already allocated, and to hold those responsible for the loan accountable for all moneys spent.

Protests U. S. School Grant

French Meddling Will Plunge Europe Into War, Duce Warns

buzzing, that Mussolini's defiance could be attributed to necessity for some bold stroke to maintain his prestige. They said that dictators cannot suffer defeat and remain dictators.

Il Duce has committed himself to victory for Gen. Francisco Franco's rebel troops and has sent thousands—probably at least 80,000—volunteers to the peninsula as well as heavy stocks of supplies and munitions.

But the Italian troops have been driven into retreat on the Guadalajara front. They have been replaced by German and Moorish troops because of their failure to stand against the Loyalist drive.

Mussolini returned from his Libyan tour two days ago to learn of this crushing blow to Fascist strength. To send more troops to Spain would be a violation of the existing non-intervention plan. So Mussolini announced he would not withdraw a single volunteer from Spain, and his ambassador to London, Dino Grandi, hinted that fresh volunteers might be dispatched if reprisals were attempted against Il Duce.

It was then that Europe began "choosing up sides"—Fascist and Communist—with democratic Britain and leftist France on the side of Communist Russia in the effort to prevent Mussolini from "winning" the Spanish war.

Italy, it was said, has not sent volunteers to Spain since the embargo became effective February 20, despite the outright charges of such violations, especially from Ivan Maisky, Soviet ambassador to London.

"Those who spread such lies deliberately are trying to undermine European peace," an Italian spokesman said.

It was then that the Italian warning that Europe would be "on the precipice of war" if France instituted League action was made.

The Italian press printed no details of Yvon Delbos' threat or plan of a naval blockade. Newspapers, however, printed an uncredited dispatch from Salamanca, Gen. Franco's headquarters, saying that between March 1 and 20 the Loyalists received the following foreign assistance:

About 1,300 volunteers, 120 machine guns, 10 tanks, 25 tons of munitions, 180 tons of foodstuffs, 350 trucks and 50 French, 30 Czechoslovakian, 10 Russian and 4 Dutch airplanes.

reported violations of the "hands off Spain" committee's ban on foreign interference in Spain, coincided with reiterations from official sources that Anglo-French policy concurred in giving the neutrality ban a thorough trial before considering more drastic steps

Unless Rome takes new offense at the strong language of Lloyd George and other Laborite speakers in Commons, observers believed British efforts to pour oil on the troubled international situation would be successful.

Parliament recessed for Easter until April 6 at the height of the debate but more fireworks were anticipated when the neutrality committee again takes up the question of the withdrawal of volunteers. Count Dino Grandi, Italian Ambassador to Great Britain and a member of the committee, has refused even to discuss it.

Lloyd George, linking Ethiopia and Spain in principle, condemned what he called "brutal, cowardly and horrible" massacres at Addis Ababa.

He charged Mussolini was being permitted to dominate Britain's life line of empire through the Mediterranean; in fact, that Mussolini openly has become dominant in the eastern Mediterranean and now is seeking to support a Fascist state in the western Mediterranean.

The Duchess of Athol, a Conservative, urged a "firm tone" by Britain, Russian and France and suggested, if that fails, "it seems an international blockade might do a great deal."

Miss Eleanor Rathbone, an Independent M. P., accused Great Britain of abandoning Ethiopia after encouraging her to rely on the League of Nations.

people of those countries that their leadership is off on thin ice."

The Nye resolution said:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of State is hereby requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to advise the Senate through its Committee on Foreign Relations whether the existing neutrality laws of the United States are sufficient to provide an embargo against nations whose armed forces are engaged in active warfare in a nation where a state of civil war exists, which state of civil war has caused our Government to declare embargoes against exportation of arms, ammunition and implements of war to that nation."

Senator Key Pittman, (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was unfriendly to the resolution, which was placed on the Senate calendar for action Monday.

Rebels Blasted In Fierce Drive; Italians Vanish

Madrid Soldiers Charge, Singing Proletarian Anthems.

By the Associated Press.

With the Spanish Government Armies at Andujar, Southern Spain, March 25.—Government officers said tonight their troops found 10,000 Italians in the insurgent lines when they went over the top in a drive against the insurgent-held city of Pozoblanco in Cordoba Province.

(Government aerial scouts reported to Valencia a "sudden disappearance" of all Italian soldiers from the insurgents' Guadalajara lines, northeast of Madrid.

(The government has contended at least 30,000 Italians participated in the Guadalajara battles, which have resulted in recent government victories.)

The push against Pozoblanco started at dawn.

The troops sang proletarian anthems as they charged, taking the first enemy trenches by surprise with hand grenades.

Artillery Blasts Rebels.

With the Government Troops, in Upper Guaralajara, Spain, March 25 (AP).—Heavy artillery blasted at insurgents atop San Cristobal hill today as infantrymen, led by tanks and joined by a bombing squadron fought bitterly to drive the enemy from their strongly fortified positions.

The government's big guns blazed all day in the furious attack to capture the hill, guarding roads to Zaragoza and Siguenza in the upper Guaralajara region north of Madrid.

While artillery and planes rained shells and bombs upon the hill's defenders, government troops fighting east of the main Aragon-Madrid highway pushed forward in an effort to join main forces concentrated in the vicinity of Almadrones.

Capture of San Cristobal Hill would pave the way for government troops to advance beyond Almadrones, which was their outpost before the insurgents launched their ill-fated offensive on March 7.

Madrid Is Shelled.

Madrid, March 25 (AP).—Insurgent airplanes and land batteries poured shells into Madrid for hours today, causing heavy casualties.

Government officials, however said the death toll was "less" than expected." Bombs were dropped in the downtown district and in outlying areas of the besieged capital.

Leftists Protest Blockade.

Valencia, Spain, March 25 (AP).—The Spanish government tonight challenged the right of the international "hands off Spain" committee to interfere with its commerce in policing Spain's coasts.

A note to the British government, issued by Foreign Minister Julio Alvarez del Vayo, asserted that the Spanish republic, "no matter what the consequences, will not tolerate any interference with boats flying her flag, which the (international) control might impose directly or indirectly, no matter what the nature of the cargo carried on board."

Italy-Yugoslavia Pact.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, March 25 (AP).—Italy and Yugoslavia signed today a five-year non-aggression, economic and political pact, designed to overcome long-standing friction between the two Adriatic countries.

The pact, which declared both Italy and Yugoslavia want to ensure permanent friendly relations on a new basis, was signed by Premier Milan Stoyadinovich of Yugoslavia and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister who came here yesterday from Rome.

U. S. Plane Firm Gets Big Order

U. S. Blamed for Naval Race In Report by French Deputy Declares Wilson's Desire for Peace Really Was Responsible for Beginning of Increase in World Armament.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 25.—The United States is described as responsible for the world naval armaments race in a report prepared by Deputy Marcel Coquillard, Independent Radical, for the Chamber of Deputies naval committee.

The report, recommending ratification of the 1936 London Naval Treaty, is studded with numerous criticisms of the role played by the United States in naval conferences since 1921 when, the professor of philosophy asserts, the post-war signal for renewed naval building was given by America.

He declares United States pride was deeply offended by treatment of her shipping during the war and that, led by President Wilson, the Nation was determined to have a great fleet powerful enough to maintain peace.

"Thus, while the great pacific Nation was refusing to enter the League at Geneva," the report asserts, "she was giving the world the paradoxical spectacle of being at the same time the originator of the idea of organization for peace and the direct cause of the armament race."

The document holds that the post-war naval program was the result of a wave of building by England and Japan, and declares that the United States called the Naval Conference of 1921 only when she realized that narrowness of the Panama Canal made it impossible for her to compete with proposed 45,000-ton Japanese ships—unless she resigned herself to separate Atlantic and Pacific fleets.

Absence of Italy and Germany from the 1936 treaty by Britain, France and the United States is dangerous for France, the naval report warns.

France must, it says, reach an understanding with Italy or "make the necessary financial effort and push our building to the rhythm of the English program—'two hulls for one.'"

As the report was made public, 250 deputies announced tonight creation of a "France-United States group." Deputy Max Hymans said the group would do its best to "make Americans understand it is in their interest to obtain repeal of the Johnson act. We will try to make the American public understand the difficulties we are up against in France, and which nation is really responsible for European armaments."

The Johnson act forbids lending of United States funds to nations which have defaulted World War debt payments.

Auto Strikers Quit Plants to Reopen Parley

big, blue bus. They explained the truce to the rank and file and urged them to accept it.

Weary from lack of rest and hoarse from successive speeches in each of the eight strike-held factories, they completed their task soon after 12:30 o'clock this afternoon, and the sit-downers emerged from the plants to stage a parade in a swirling snowstorm.

With banners whipping in the snow-laden wind, the strikers marched from the plants and delivered the keys to State police troopers.

Argue for Three Hours.

Three hours of explanation, argument and even exhortation were required at the Dodge and Chrysler Jefferson plants. The evacuation had been scheduled tentatively for 9 a. m. It was nearly four hours later before it actually began.

The first plebiscite, at the De-Soto plant, came at 2:15 a. m. The final vote, at the Chrysler Kercheval plant, was not taken until 12:40 p. m.

By that time, Martin and Frankensteen barely could speak above a whisper.

The delay caused confusion in scheduled plans for evacuation demonstrations. Hundreds of strikers, impatient to get home, left during the morning. At the De-Soto plant, the strikers marched out in parade formation, only to do an about-face and march back in because State policemen had not arrived to accept the keys.

Formal evacuation ceremonies were held at all plants during the afternoon. Some of the strikers went from plant to plant to join in the cheering. Then they went home.

Led by Big Band.

The most imposing demonstration was at the Dodge plant. Sixteen hundred men and scores of women who had entered the plant during the morning emerged from the main gate at 1:50 p. m., led by a 75-piece band and a color guard bearing without formality. Union officials said 5,000 were in the plant last night.

Hundreds of persons lined the streets and exchanged cheers with the strikers as they marched to Solidarity Hall. Many of the strikers carried cots, blankets and even radio sets with which they had "kept house" within the plant.

State police took over the control of Chrysler plant gates and entrances, and the union announced it would establish picket lines to insure that no attempt to resume operations pending the negotiations here would be made.

Gov. Murphy, declaring references to "revolution" in Michigan were "utter and sheer nonsense," said today:

"We are not and are not going to be in a state of revolution. Wages will be higher, conditions better and our people more contented than in any State in the Union. This is to be accomplished without bloodshed or loss of life."

Governor Defends Action.

Defending his course in the General Motors strikes, which ended peaceably after court orders for arrest of sit-down strikers at Flint, Mich., went unserved pending the negotiations, the Governor said:

"What would have happened if employes had been shot out at Flint plants and a bloody mess created? A sample is found in a few ousters in Detroit and a demonstration staged by 50,000 to 150,000 persons. Unfortunately, serious action in Flint easily could have precipitated a labor conflict of the gravest magnitude."

He added that recent strikes have been due, not to the handling of the General Motors situation, but "to other reasons apparent to anyone who cares to look beneath the surface." He declined to elaborate.

In the renewed conferences between Chrysler and Lewis the principal issue of the strikes—sole collective bargaining recognition for the U. A. W. A.—remains to be negotiated.

Chrysler executives, in negotiations which started before the strike, had returned a consistent "No!" to such demands.

The exodus of the Chrysler strikers was accompanied by a wide decline in the sitting style of strikes.

Instead, in a half-dozen controversies, some of them supported by C. I. O., workers resorted to picket lines.

Federal Judge Of 68 Is Named By President

Nominee Pledges to Quit Bench at 70; Supports Roosevelt Plan.

By Franklyn Waltman.

In the face of his recent declaration, in connection with his Supreme Court reorganization plan, that the Federal judiciary required an infusion of new and young blood to revitalize it, President Roosevelt yesterday named to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals a man who was 68 years old last December.

The President's appointee was Robert Lee Williams, a Federal judge for the Eastern District of Oklahoma since 1919. His appointment is a judicial promotion, carrying with it an increase in annual salary of $2,000.

Accompanying the submission of Judge Williams' name to the Senate was a letter from him to Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, promising that should he be appointed to the circuit bench, he would retire on reaching the age of 70 years, under provisions of the judiciary act which would permit him to retire on full pay for the remainder of his life.

"This would be in harmony with the President's judicial program and court plan, which I indorse and approve," Judge Williams wrote.

Letter Is Unusual.

Aside from the interest which attaches to Judge Williams' age as a result of the current judicial controversy, his appointment attracted attention also because of the unusual if not unprecedented letter which was made public in connection with it. Although men may actively seek other Federal offices, candidates for the Federal bench as a rule do not solicit such appointments.

Judge Williams' letter, however, could be construed as a bid for the appointment. He apparently had doubted the propriety of his letter for in conclusion he asserted that "I hope you will pardon this letter and that it will not be considered inappropriate or improper."

Text of Letter.

The text of Judge Williams' letter was as follows:

"I understand that you are considering me for promotion to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals and would consider it an honor to be thus promoted.

"It is agreeable to me in event of such promotion to retire at age of 70, under act of February 25, 1919, as amended March 1, 1929 (28 USCA Sec. 375), when retiring age is reached. This would be in harmony with the President's judicial program and court plan, which I indorse and approve.

"I hope you will pardon this letter and that it will not be considered as inappropriate or improper."

Prominent in Oklahoma.

Even if Judge Williams, if confirmed as an appellate judge, retires on his seventieth birthday he will have served one year and approximately nine months on that bench. He was born December 20, 1868, has been a dominant public figure in Oklahoma affairs since Territorial days, served as Governor of the State from 1915 to 1919 and previously as the chief justice of the State Supreme Court.

The Oklahoman is known as an ardent Democrat, having served on the Democratic national committee from 1904 to 1908. The Associated Press relates that in 1928 he adjourned his court to rush to a Methodist Church conference to oppose a resolution terming that year's Presidential campaign a referendum on prohibition.

"I don't think the church should be made an army of Republicans," the Associated Press quoted him as telling the conference.

Ten Get Appointments.

Although President Roosevelt about three months ago in a press conference declared he had imposed on himself a rule not to name to the Federal bench any person beyond 60 years old, Judge Williams' appointment to the circuit bench makes the tenth person over that age to whom he has given such appointments. Including Judge Williams, seven were appointees to the circuit bench.

As pointed out in The Washington Post of March 3 last, one of the President's appointees to the Federal circuit bench was just past 70 years old when named and he retired 11 months later because of physical disability.

Columbia Dean, Roosevelt Backer, Deserts Him on Plan to Enlarge Supreme Court

nesses who have asked for a hearing are put on the stand, "it would take at least a month to get through."

Dean Smith opened his presentation with a statement that present-day conditions require many changes in the Constitution.

To accomplish these ends, he said, it is "unnecessary to jeopardise those basic principles upon which our form of government rests." He said there is no certainty in the outcome of the President's proposal. It would damage, he testified, Supreme Court independence and "impair the confidence of the people" in it.

Quotes President's Talk.

Finally, he declared, it would bring about fundamental changes in the Federal system without submitting the question to the people.

Smith said he drew this last conclusion from the President's radio speech March 9 in which "he espoused an interpretation of the Constitution to the effect that the power of Congress to provide for the general welfare of the United States was a general power." He said this differed with the views of most statesmen, lawyers, legal scholars and even with the brief of the Government in the AAA case.

The President had said the Constitution gave Congress broad powers "to levy taxes * * * and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States."

By thus omitting much of the language of the clause, Smith declared the President abandoned the assumption that it was solely a limitation upon taxing powers of Congress. Instead, he said, the President interpreted general welfare as a separate and independent power.

"If the President appoints six new judges sharing this view, the Federal Government will be able to do anything not specifically prohibited in the Constitution," Smith said on cross-examination.

"What would become of your State sovereignty under that interpretation?" asked Dean Smith. "What powers would be left to the States? Federal power could be carried to the extent of regulating purely intra-State matters having a national effect—to education, to marriage and divorce, to almost any other thing."

In this light, Smith testified, the President's court plan "becomes the most drastic form of amendment to the Constitution that you could draw, and one adopted by a change of policy, without submission to the people."

Fears For Liberty.

Smith said that extension of governmental control from Washington is inevitable, that the comparatively "simple set-up" used in the past will not suffice in the future.

"You are going to have more and more Government regulation as time goes on," he testified. "It isn't a matter of whether I want it or not, it is going to come. That to me makes an independent judiciary more necessary now than ever before. It would be very fortunate to always have a court supporting the Government.

"We are moving into an era when an independent judiciary is going to be very important to you and to me and to those of us who might get caught in this governmental machine. When we cease to have an independent judiciary, then personal liberty is gone."

Smith was closely questioned by both friends and opponents of the court bill on his constitutional amendment "alternative," particularly on possibilities of speedy enactment.

He predicted prompt approval could be had if the amendment were submitted to ratifying conventions, instead of to State legislatures, as was first done in repealing the prohibition amendment.

Brenckman's testimony against the court plan followed a strongly hostile statement Wednesday by L. J. Taber, National Grange master. Brenckman echoed Taber's views, and declared those opposing the plan "will deserve to have their names enshrined in the hearts of the people as the faithful guardians of their most sacred rights."

"If this measure should be enacted," said the Grange representative, "those who give it their support will be placed in imminent peril of standing accused at the bar of history with having supinely acquiesced in a step resulting in the overthrow of our constitutional form of government."

Called a "Lobbyist."

There was one sharp interchange when Senator William H. Dieterich (Democrat), of Illinois, called Brenckman "a lobbyist." 'Call me a lobbyist if you will," the witness smilingly retorted. "There is a lot of Grange business cleared through our Washington office." The Grange, oldest farm organization, lists the President among its members.

Dr. Wickey, of this city, final witness, said he had found opposition to the court plan from educational leaders in travels through Wisconsin, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York. He said "the humblest American citizens" he has approached feel the Supreme Court "has been unjustly and unwisely criticized."

"They know instinctively, as well as from experience of other nations, that the courts of a country dare not be subject to the suggestions of groups and parties," Dr. Wickey said, adding: "Christian educators of America believe that a democracy rests on freedom and liberty, not on force."

The witness, who was not cross-examined, concluded:

"We believe that a Supreme Court whose size is subject to the wish of its members to retire, to resign, or to die upon reaching the age of 70, as well as the wish of the President to appoint successors or additional judges, is a dangerous institution."

Friends Honor Morris Simon At Club Dinner

Attorney, Insurance Broker Entertained on His Fiftieth Birthday.

Morris Simon, Washington attorney and insurance broker, was honored at the Woodmont Country Club last night as a host of friends held a dinner in honor of him and in celebration of his fiftieth birthday.

Many speakers praised Mr. Simon, among them Dr. Abram Simon, rabbi of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, who declared that the guest of honor's wife, Natalie, was the reason for his success. Mrs. Simon was not present to hear herself praised as the dinner was for men only.

Among the speakers who paid tribute to the man were Edmund Kaufman and Leo Freudberg, co-chairmen of the committee on arrangements; Henry I. Quinn, president of the District Bar Association and member of the Board of Education; David Baer, vice president of the club; Stanley Fisher, secretary of the club; Dr. Custis Lee Hall, and Eugene Young, who has been Mr. Simon's partner for 30 years.

There were two interesting entertainment features. One brought electrically transcribed "imitated" greetings to Simon from King George VI, Mussolini, Albert Einstein, Leon Blum and Rabbi Stephen Wise. The other was the showing of the "March of Simon," which was pictures of the honor guest from childhood to the present.

Woman Killed In Leap; Second Death Attempt

Mrs. Rea Plunges From Attic Window of Home at Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Rebecca Wampler Rea, 36, wife of Courts D. Rea, Social Security Board official, died en route to Georgetown Hospital yesterday after a 35-foot plunge from the attic of her home at 4515 Ridge street, Chevy Chase, Md.

The woman was found unconscious Monday after a gas explosion at the home. She was found lying on three chairs before the gas stove in the kitchen, her hair and scalp burned, but not seriously injured by the explosion. Police said they believed she had failed to turn off the pilot light before turning on the gas. Contents of a note found Monday were not revealed by police.

Since the earlier attempt, Mrs. John Turner, of 815 Eighteenth street northwest, a sister, has been staying with Mrs. Rea. Mrs Rea did not sleep all last night, the sister told police, and about 4:30 yesterday morning, the sister tried to get her to take a sedative, which she refused. The sister dozed for a moment and when she awoke, Mrs. Rea was gone.

Calling Mr. Rea, asleep in another room, the sister started searching for Mrs. Rea. She was found on the concrete sidewalk outside the home by her husband. The Bethesda Rescue Squad took her to Georgetown Hospital, where she was pronounced dead.

The woman had crawled up a ladder into the attic and jumped from a window to the ground 35 feet below.

Chloroform Case May Be 'Settled' At Charlottesville

Charlottesville, Va., March 25 (AP). Commonwealth's Attorney W. O. Fife agreed today that a compromise between defense and prosecution in the case of Dr. R. G. Miller, charged with murdering Cleo Sprouse, probably would be the "most satisfactory outcome if the ends of justice could be met."

Fife conferred with E. V. Walker, counsel for the 53-year-old dentist after the date for the "chloroform murder" trial was set yesterday for April 12 by Judge Lemuel T. Smith of Albemarle County.

Neither Fife nor Miller's counsel would disclose what they thought would be a suitable compromise "to meet the ends of justice."

Seven Arrested In Fifth Precinct 'Numbers' Raids

Fifth Precinct police yesterday staged their own drive against gamblers when they raided three alleged "numbers" places, arresting four women and three men.

Led by Capt Joseph Morgan and Sergt. George Walldrodt, the raiders smashed their way into the establishments, all private homes in the 100 block L street southeast.

Large quantities of alleged "numbers" slips were seized with marked money. The slips and money were taken to the Fifth Precinct station to be used as evidence.

At the station house, the suspects were booked by Detective Robert Eagan who engineered the raids. All were charged with operating a lottery. They gave their names as Martha Thomas, 52; Mildred Evans, 46; Maude Clarke, 28; Mamie and John Taylor, all colored and all of the 100 block L street southeast, and two white men, Harry Brantell, 32, of the 1100 block Holbrook place northeast, and Elvin Hendricks, 21, of the 200 block Ninth street northeast.

The raiders were armed with warrants from United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Smithsonian Scientist Reports Red, Blue Light Best for Plants

Light Wave Lengths of 6,550 and 4,400 Angstrom Units Produce Principal Elements for Absorbing Carbon Dioxide.

You will be glad to learn that the principal reasons for the trees, the birds and the lovely spring countryside are the light wave lengths of 6,550 and 4,400 Angstrom units.

This has been discovered by W. H. Hoover, of the Smithsonian Institution's division of radiation and organisms. He's been conducting experiments on the photosynthesis of wheat.

What Hoover did was to find out under what light plants most rapidly absorbed and assimilated carbon dioxide from the air. Plants have to have their carbon dioxide just as scientists have to have their beefsteak and chorus girls their caviar.

It's important that plants get fed properly because it's upon their growth that all life ultimately depends.

Using a sensitive filter, Hoover illuminated growing wheat with all the colors of the visible spectrum. He found that two colors, deep red and blue, were most effective in promoting the assimilation of carbon dioxide.

The deep red has a light wave length of about 6,550 Angstrom units. An Angstrom unit is a ten-millionth of a millimeter and is, scientists say, the unit most convenient to use in measuring the wave length of light.

Green light, Hoover discovered, is not very efficient in furthering carbon dioxide assimilation. It seems that the leaves reflect the light instead of absorbing it. That is responsible for the green appearance of the countryside.

In announcing Hoover's findings, the Smithsonian Institution said that his results were accurate to within 4 per cent. Such accuracy, it was said, made his work a notable advance in this particular field of botany.

Capital Transit Gives Pay Rise To 3,300 Men

Increase Totals $221,000 Yearly; Firm to Press for Higher Fares.

Salary increases totaling $221,000 a year were granted 3,300 employes of the Capital Transit Co. yesterday when the firm's board of directors concluded negotiations with the Amalgamated Association of Electrical, Street Railway and Bus Operators.

Operators of one-man cars and buses were granted an increase of 3 cents an hour, while crews of two-man cars and all other hourly workers except common laborers will receive raises of 2 cents an hour.

Increased social security tax payments which will accompany the pay raises, the company said, will add approximately $228,000 to its annual operating costs.

The added salary burden is expected to be used as a strong argument by the company in its forthcoming fight for higher fares. For the last several months company officials have presented to the Public Utilities Commission the need for increased revenue to offset higher operating costs and costs of the rerouting program and additional equipment.

Last summer the company asked the commission to grant an increase in the token fare from the present rate of 4 for 30 cents to 3 for 25 cents.

Public hearings on the value of the company will start April 12. Hearings on the proposed fare increases will start after the value has been fixed.

The wage increases are the second granted by the company in two years following negotiations with the employes' union.

Senate Group Favors Street Funds for D.C.

Capital Would Get Share of Federal Highway Allotments.

The Senate District Committee yesterday reported favorably a bill, which if enacted, will place the District on a parity with the States in obtaining Federal highway aid from the Bureau of Public Roads every year.

The bill, sponsored by Chairman King, was explained by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways. He said that under the 1936 appropriation the District would have received $619,000 had the law been in effect. The District is the only political subdivision of the United States, he said, that does not benefit under the Federal roads fund. Yet the District paid more than $2,000,000 in gasoline taxes to the Federal Government in 1936.

The Senate committee also reported favorably three other local bills but deferred action on the measure to prevent blindness in infants because of confusion over the language.

One of the measures approved aims to eliminate the $100 minimum in traffic accident judgments for which an operating permit may be suspended if it is not paid.

A bill, already approved by the House District Committee, allowing bowling in the District on Sundays after 2 p. m., was reported favorably.

The fourth bill approved raises the authorization for vocational rehabilitation of veterans in the District from $15,000 to $25,000. The appropriations have already been increased by that amount.

Brown Plans Special School For Detectives

Efficiency Increase Is Aim; Inquiry Board Asks Demotion of 5.

Plans for the establishment of a special school to train detectives are being formulated by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, The Post learned last night.

Maj. Brown indicated he feels the school is necessary after he made a cursory study of a report submitted to him by a board of inspectors who for the last two months have been investigating the work of precinct detectives.

From what he has read of the report, Maj. Brown said he believed plain-clothes men need specialized training. He stated the police school training for rookie policemen is not extensive enough to equip men for detective work.

Required Attendance.

When the school is established, it was said, the men will be required to attend several classes each week which will be under the supervision of Detective Bureau officials.

Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson, his assistant, Ira E. Keck, and Lieut. John H. Fowler, balistics expert, were some of the men mentioned who probably will be instructors.

Maj. Brown, however, refused to comment on the report of Inspectors Edward J. Kelly, Maurice Collins and William E. Holmes. He said the inspectors have made several recommendations.

May Demote Five.

The Post learned that the board has recommended the demotion of at least five precinct detectives, which will necessitate the rearranging of 38 precinct plain-clothes investigators.

The men demoted will be returned to precinct "beats" and their positions filled by the promotion of police privates.

Demotion of the men was due, The Post learned, to their inability to solve cases in the precincts they had been working. Also, the board's report indicated, the men are unfitted for detective work.

Maj. Brown said the new school will eliminate recurrence of such conditions.

Colored Woman 'Misremembers' Age Before Court

A colored woman who "misremembered" how old she was, but declared she was "a big girl before the Civil War," stood in Police Court yesterday and stoutly denied the charge she had thrown a cup of hot water on a 12-year-old boy.

She is Adeline Waters, a small, wizened former slave who was accused by Mrs. Josephine Gaskins, colored, of scalding her son, Willett.

Arrested at her home, 2505 P street, day before yesterday, Mrs. Waters spent a night in jail. When she appeared before Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday she said she threw cold water after he tossed a brick through her window. Judge Curran warned Mrs. Gaskins to keep her son from teasing the elderly woman and took the defendant's personal bond. The latter admitted it was not her first fling at odds with the law. She was arrested 25 years ago for playing some sort of lottery game, she said. "I was so old then," she added, "that the judge just laughed and told me to go on home."

Marine Planes to Stage Demonstration Tuesday

Two squadrons of Marine planes, composed of 30 fighting and bombing planes, will stage a demonstration next Tuesday afternoon at the Anacostia Naval Air Station, in connection with a three-day meeting of the National Intercollegiate Flying Association. The Intercollegiate Association is meeting here March 29, 30 and 31.

Individual bombing attacks will be carried out by both squadrons, Fighting Squadron Nine and Bombing Squadron Six from the Fleet Marine Force, based at Quantico, Va. While one squadron is bombing, the other unit will carry out squadron flight maneuvers. A target will be anchored in the river off Haines Point. Following the bombing, the squadrons will assemble in the vicinity of the Anacostia bridge and pass on review over the Naval Air Station.

Student Killed, Trio Injured as Car Overturns

Parr Hooper McQueen Dies in Accident at Wytheville, Va.

Parr Hooper McQueen, 19-year-old son of a Washington Gas Light Co. official, was killed yesterday when a car in which he was riding with fellow students at the University of the South overturned near Wytheville, Va.

Three other youths, two of them from Washington, were injured in the same accident. They are Gilbert Edson, 19, son of Mrs. Bess Edson, of the Shoreham Hotel; Finley Wright, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Wright, of 1134 Wyoming avenue northwest, and Wallace Gage, of Williamstown, Mass.

Wright, said to have been the driver of the car, suffered head injuries. Gage received a broken shoulder, while Edson suffered shock.

The roadster in which the four students were homeward-bound from Sewanee, Tenn., for the Easter holidays, left the road 15 miles west of Wytheville, hit a fence post and concrete culvert and overturned. McQueen was blieved to have been riding in the rumble seat.

The injured youths were taken to a hospital at Rural Retreat, Va. McQueen's body was taken to a funeral home in the same village.

McQueen, who graduated last year from Central High School, lived at Linden, Md. He was the son of James Russell McQueen, superintendent of installation and maintenance for the Washington Gas Light Co. His grandfather, J. B. McQueen, is president of a printing firm at 520 Tenth street northwest.

Funeral services will be held here either today or tomorrow.

St. Louis, March 25 (AP).—William Sachs, 63, nationally known Missouri Republican leader, died at a hospital here early today. He was defeated for the United States Senate in 1922. He was an attorney and banker.

District Traffic Command Remains Unfilled; 36th Victim of Accidents This Year Succumbs

the smiling young woman pulled to the curb.

"I stopped you," said Patton, "to warn you that you have violated District speed regulations."

"Oh, I'm so sorry," responded the woman, "the car got away from me for a minute. I noticed I was traveling too fast."

"Suppose," suggested Policeman Patton, "that someone had stepped from the curb or another car had blocked your path—there probably would have been a serious accident."

"I must warn you," Patton added, "to obey our traffic regulations and drive with care. Your country would expect the same from us."

Again the woman smiled and drove off.

The patrol car followed. A few blocks further, the woman swung sharply into a side street—without a hand signal—and parked her car in front of a sign reading: "No parking at any time."

Police authorities are powerless to enforce traffic regulations against representatives of foreign countries and in certain cases, against members of our own Congress. And during daily tours by the safety patrol, these types of drivers are repeatedly observed in flagrant law infractions.

Policeman Patton took no action against the former Southern Governor. His infraction—passing a "stop" sign—was not flagrant nor willful. Traffic was light and the car was traveling slowly. He stopped for a warning, however.

Lorenzo Jackson, colored, 36, 716 Rock Creek Church road northwest, died in Freedman's Hospital yesterday, the District's first traffic fatality in 15 days and the thirty-sixth for this year.

Jackson was struck by two automobiles at Georgia avenue and Barry place northwest early Wednesday. Police said the driver of the first machine that struck him failed to stop.

An inquest is scheduled to be held at the District Morgue today. Police said Jack Berger, 21, 1315 Park road northwest, who failed to stop, will be arraigned before the coroner's jury.

Police reported that after Jackson was struck by Berger's car he fell into the path of another machine operated by Irvin M. Hayman, 19, 1614 Montague street northwest.

Over radio station WMAL on the "Postilion" program, this reporter, Policeman Patton and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer told what is being done to safeguard the lives of Washington motorists and pedestrians.

The daily safety patrol cruises were described and Van Duzer cited the need for more strict examination of prospective drivers. He appealed for public co-operation in the current safety drive.

To impress other motorists of driving dangers, Frank S. Koonce, recent victim of a hit-and-run driver, was interviewed by Postilion Tom McCarthy. Koonce described the accident and told of a companion who has been in the hospital for seven weeks as a result.

A Worthy Memorial.

The large and enthusiastic attendance at the two stimulating lectures given by Prof. Harold J. Laski at Constitution Hall, coupled with the similar reception for the earlier address by Prof. Charles A. Beard, is convincing evidence of the wisdom of those who planned a Bronson Cutting Memorial in the form of lectures.

For a city around which so much of the life of the Nation revolves Washington has been rather conspicuously lacking in such forms of intellectual entertainment. Partly this is the natural reaction of a community drenched in professional oratory. Partly it is attributable to the fact that the local college communities are not yet the thoroughly integrated and dominant part of municipal life they form elsewhere. Whatever the cause, it is healthy that this new institution, like the Town Hall and other agencies, is breaking down the tradition that Washingtonians are apathetic to public discussion.

Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, who made possible this living memorial to her famous son, has reason to be convinced of the wisdom of the belief that in this practical and constructive manner the life and spirit of a truly great American is best commemorated. The turnout for this year's memorial lectures constituted a splendid tribute to Senator Cutting. And the speakers have happily exemplified the vigor and vitality of the democratic spirit to which he was so thoroughly devoted.

History On The Stage.

John Drinkwater's claim to future fame will probably rest chiefly on his authorship of "Abraham Lincoln," a sympathetic depiction of the great Civil War President which swept the English-speaking world by storm some years ago.

Others before him had kaleidoscoped within the confines of a play the life and character of some great historic figure. There was Schiller with "William Tell," Goethe with "Egmont," Shakespeare with a whole host of historical plays and Ibsen with his "Emperor and Galilean," to cite but a few.

Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" gave the historical stage portrait a modern vogue which shows no signs of exhaustion. Within recent years there have been plays—not to mention movies—centering on Queen Victoria, Queen Elizabeth, Catherine the Great, Napoleon, Parnell, Pepys, Poe and many others.

Mr. Drinkwater himself dug deeply into that vein of dramatic possibilities. But none of his other biographical plays, not excluding "Robert E. Lee," won the same popular acclaim as that dealing with Lincoln.

M. Blum's Latest Triumph.

As a master of statecraft, Leon Blum, France's scholarly premier, is rapidly revealing that he has no superior in contemporary Europe. With unfailing regularity he has managed to turn potential defeat into substantial victory. That was true last summer when he was faced with, and disposed of, a serious epidemic of sit-down strikes. That has largely been the case with his Spanish non-intervention policy, which has helped to consolidate good relations between France and Great Britain. And it has just been true again.

There were those who believed that the Popular Front regime was endangered by the recent serious riots at Clichy, one of the Communist suburbs of Paris. It was argued that as a result of this flare-up of violence, M. Blum would have to part company with either the Communists or the moderate Radical Socialists. Both these parties belong to the Popular Front. Since the premier has repeatedly declared that he would only remain in office as long as the present coalition of Leftist groups remains a unit behind him, any important defection would mean the resignation of the cabinet.

In the Chamber debate on the Clichy riots, M. Blum showed the same courage and finesse he has displayed ever since he became premier. He ignored the clamor both from the Right and the Left. He suggested that the pro-Fascist French Social Party (formerly the Croix de Feu) had given their enemies unnecessary provocation by staging a meeting in Red Clichy. On the other hand he chastised the Communists for their ruffianism in trying to break up what was, after all, a peacefully conducted gathering by the followers of Col. de la Rocque. After a prolonged debate, in which a great deal of heat was generated, M. Blum was given a 362-215 vote of confidence with only a few of the Radical Socialists abstaining.

This vote is of more than domestic significance. It emphasizes that France today possesses strong leadership and a unity of purpose conspicuously absent during recent years. With the background provided by the Chamber vote, no less than by the success of the government's loan program, the attitude displayed by Foreign Minister Delbos towards events in Spain takes on greater significance. For M. Delbos, in showing that French patience with Italian intervention is about exhausted, suggests a more assertive foreign policy than has lately been directed from Paris.

France has repeatedly shown during recent months that she is willing to close her eyes to much that has been going on in Spain if, in so doing, the peace of Europe can be preserved. But with his domestic position now shown to be unassailable, M. Blum may well decide that an ostrich policy is valueless. The stiffening of the French attitude on the Spanish problem is a factor of obvious importance in the uneasy Europe of today.

Partial Solution.

Gov. Murphy has again intervened successfully in a major dispute in the automobile industry, securing acceptance of a compromise proposal which should enable representatives of the Chrysler Corporation and its striking employes to negotiate a settlement by peaceful means.

There is one very important difference, however, between the method followed in the present instance and in the handling of the General Motors controversy. At Flint Gov. Murphy, confronted by a situation of extreme gravity, was inclined to be overlenient in his treatment of those who had defied court orders. At Detroit there were increasingly strong intimations that, if necessary, force would be met by greater force.

Leniency at Flint was rewarded by a settlement that averted possible bloodshed and resulted in an acceptable plan of collective bargaining. It was a happy ending to a grim conflict that had meant prolonged enforced idleness for thousands of workers and might have led to much more distressing civil disorders. The dark side of the picture lies in the fact that the sit-down strikers won a strategic victory that encouraged rapid spread of their lawless tactics to other fields. In the Chrysler case, fortunately, Gov. Murphy has taken a stronger stand against the illegal occupancy of company plants. Its fruit is found in the fact that he has induced the strikers to leave as a preliminary to the beginning of negotiations with the company management.

Fair warning has been given, it would seem, that in the State of Michigan the new strike technique cannot be employed with impunity. Aside from that rather uncertain assurance, the Chrysler preliminary settlement is much like that of General Motors. It meets a special situation, but it does not offer a constructive solution of the serious labor problems that created the trouble. Gov. Murphy has done the best he could under exceptionally trying circumstances, with the President saying no word as to desirable national policy. But that best is not enough.

The Canadian Minister of Justice has taken the occasion to point out that the Dominion government is prepared to use all the resources and agencies at its command to restrain and eliminate any manifestations of the sit-down strike in Canada. Such strikes, he stated, would not only undermine respect for law and order, disrupt business and incite to riots, but would be contrary to the views of organized labor in Canada, where "legitimate means of redressing grievances already exist."

Our States and the Federal Government would be in a position to take an equally firm stand against the illegal sit-down strike, and would have no excuse for inaction, if we, too, had provided labor with "legitimate means of redressing grievances." But because of the bitter anti-union activities of powerful corporations, and the lack of effective machinery for peaceful arbitrament of industrial disputes, public officials are reluctant to resort to forcible suppression of quasi-revolutionary organization methods.

Spokesmen for the Administration have tried to make it appear that the Wagner labor relations act is capable of providing the machinery for dealing with industrial disputes like those in the motor industry. Such claims are without justification. The National Labor Relations Board is not a mediatory agency but a judicial body, acting only upon complaints of labor. The doubtful constitutional status of the law does not prevent the board from functioning in a limited way but it is already demonstrated that it will not be invoked if labor has reason to fear its findings.

The Wagner act can be used as a red herring to make it seem that the Supreme Court is to blame for the Administration's failure to formulate effective mediatory machinery. But thoughtful students of the difficulty will look further. The railway labor act, for instance, provides a method of settling disputes between rail labor and railway managements that has worked remarkably well, preventing strikes and lockouts and assisting adjustments of disputes. With modifications that act might become the basis for Federal and State legislation of a more general character, designed to substitute settlement by negotiation for decisions reached after costly industrial warfare.

The orderly way in which the Detroit sit-down strikers responded to the call for evacuation is an encouraging sign that discipline is possible even when an organization movement is in its infancy. Obviously every effort was made to impress both the management and the general public with the union's sense of responsibility. That is a good portent for the forthcoming negotiations. When a union proves its discipline and its constructive value it will almost automatically become the "sole bargaining agency." If it has no sense of social responsibility, not even organized terrorism can force an employer to recognize it as such.

An Unsuitable Substitute.

Senator Borah is doubtless right in concluding that the high age limit of the pending child-labor amendment is largely responsible for the reluctance of certain States to ratify it. However, his proposal to reduce the limitation to the age of 14 seems undesirable for a number of reasons. Apart from the objections to so low a limit in parts of the country where present regulation embraces higher age groups, the Borah proposal would unduly restrict the power of Congress to exercise its judgment as to the kind of legislation needed.

If the States are willing to entrust the Federal Government with the regulation of child labor, surrendering their own rights to the extent necessary to give effect to a Federal law, they should be prepared to rely upon its discretion in the exercise of such power. If they lack confidence, and fear that Congress will resort to extreme measures, the logical course is to deny Congress the authority that is here sought.

The pending child-labor amendment merely permits, it does not command, Congress to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age. It is altogether unlikely that any Federal law giving effect to this proposed amendment would attempt to set standards markedly higher than those now prevailing in a majority of the States.

Nevertheless, if legislation regulating economic activities is to be effective, it must be adapted to the needs of changing conditions, and standards, and unforeseen circumstances. To frame an amendment in such fashion as to hamper Congress in the exercise of a reasonable discretion would be shortsighted.

Congress should not handicap itself by rigid constitutional definitions and limitations. They have no place in a document that was intended to present in broad outline the limits of constitutional authority of the several branches of the Federal Government in relation to one another and to the States.

Blow, Bugle, Blow!

If it is true, as has been frequently asserted, that Americans are a long-suffering people, then the citizens of Baxter, Tenn., are typically American. There lives a man who every morning at 6 o'clock climbs a tall chestnut pole and blows a bugle. He has been doing it daily since March, 1924, and nobody to date has taken a pot shot at him.

There are, doubtless, some few within earshot to whom the blast is welcome. They have to be up at 6 and the imitation rooster in high feather is as good as an alarm clock. But what about those who wish to sleep and who, with good reason, curse the man who invented early rising? Have they no rights a bugler should respect?

This pole sitter says that bugle blowing keeps his chest in good condition, but that isn't a reason; it is just an excuse. If a mighty chest is all he desires, why not a job as a glass blower? And if he feels that he must blow, why not his own schnozzle and let it go at that?

Still, one doesn't wish to be harsh. It may be that the bugler considers himself a public benefactor and that he gives the populace pleasure by diurnally declaring that he can't get 'em up, he can't get 'em up, he can't get 'em up in the morning. Perhaps he knows himself to be a mighty fine bugler and has no wish to keep all the fun to himself.

And there, undoubtedly, we have a clue to this Tennessee mystery: The acrobatic and noisy gentleman, undoubtedly, is simply showing unusual symptoms of a very common complaint. He wishes to draw attention to himself. And he is not the only one who satisfies this urge by blowing his own horn.

The Word Is 'Syphilis.'

From the Hartford Courant.

Nice Nellie, who, according to the Surgeon General of the United States, is the most powerful opponent in the campaign to eradicate syphilis, has added another laurel wreath to her shameful collection. Because a number of Senators in the New York Legislature thought the word "syphilis" was "indecent" and "dirty," the bureau in the New York Department of Health organized to deal with the disease will be known as the "Division of Social Hygiene" instead of the "Division of Syphilis."

Syphilis can be acquired as innocently as measles or mumps. There is no more reason why it should not be mentioned than there is cause for hiding the existence of appendicitis. Indeed, appendicitis and syphilis have this much in common: If treated when the first symptoms appear they are relatively easy to deal with. Delay is dangerous and not infrequently fatal in both cases. The sooner the public can be taught that frank and honest recognition of the damage syphilis does is the first essential to the control of this most insidious of diseases, the sooner can syphilis be eradicated. Such examples of misguided prudery as that of the New York Senate are happily less common than they used to be, but as long as they continue, the campaign against syphilis will be hampered.

Art And Burlesque.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under the cloak of anonymity one of your correspondents launches a vicious attack upon the ancient institution of burlesque. To my certain knowledge a goodly coterie of tired local business men are wont, upon occasion, to go down to Col. Jimmie Lake's playhouse, rub elbows with the proletariat, and there in the love of Nature "hold communion with her visible forms." Surely among them there should be one with the decency to come openly to the colonel's defense, now that an attempt is being made to arouse the public against his peculiar type of dramatic art.

Right at the start the colonel and your correspondent would no doubt find themselves in hearty disagreement as to just what constitutes art. Someone has described it as any representation which, upon being observed, has the faculty of exciting the emotions of the observer.

Perhaps your anonymous correspondent has too narrow an appreciation of artistic and literary values. He may find an appeal in gazing upon a Mona Lisa and striving to find the meaning in her enigmatic smile; while the colonel's patrons get a greater kick out of the robust laughter of Hinda Wassau. The art of Leonardo and the Minskys employs a radically different technique. However, the emotions of the bald-headed row witnessing the "Beautiful Ann Corio" in her "strip tease act," are probably much akin to those of the more effete art lover gazing upon, let us say, the statue of Leda and the Swan.

True, as your correspondent states, the flavor of much of the Rabelaisian repartee of the burlesque is a bit gamey for the average palate. But may this not be said of much of Shakespeare, Beaumont and Fletcher—not to mention Coward and O'Neill? But there are droll bits at which one may lean back and chuckle, and with a sense of self-satisfaction murmur the words of a universally mourned and beloved jurist: "Thank God, I am a man of low tastes."

If the test of dramatic art is "to hold, as it were, the mirror up to Nature," who is there to deny that burlesque is a pretty fair reflection of American folk lore, as it lives today in oft-repeated legends in the market place, clubs, Pullman smokers and most everywhere else where men congregate?

Code For Street Car Users.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the hope that the guilty ones may become more considerate of their fellow passengers it seems appropriate to invite attention to certain objectionable or "queer' behavior on the part of some street car patrons, which is doubtless more or less offensive to the great majority of passengers. Some of the most objectionable are as follows:

1. Chewing gum (especially cow fashion with mouth open and revolving jaws).
2. Sitting cross-legged with foot extending into space needed for standing or passing passengers.
3. Standing in the way of persons entering or leaving the car when other space is available.
4. Pressing button before car has left previous stop, sometimes confusing car crew and causing sudden, jolting stop.
5. Occupying more seat space than necessary when others are standing.
6. Dropping papers or other trash on floor or seats.
7. Chewing tobacco by motorman accompanied by frequent spitting through the door.

Comments On Labor's Actions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one of those who was crippled for life in the so-called effort to make the world safe for democracy, it occurs to me that this democratic form of government has resulted in a tyrannical form of government by a small minority of the total population. I refer to the labor organizations, and more particularly to their leaders.

As one who has always believed in the "square deal" for labor and for every man, for that matter, I take this opportunity to point out to these labor leaders that the history of this country will show that although the masses of consumers are long-suffering, there comes a day when they grow so exasperated by tyranny that fear of death is forgotten and they revolt.

Let the labor unions be sure they are not being brought into the position where they may justly be called human hogs by the balance of our population. Thus they will lose all sympathy.

Let them remember that, under the Constitution, the good of the majority is the basis. Let them remember that had not the majority been willing to help them in the beginning in their efforts to obtain just compensation, they never would have reached the point where they now are. The public has the power to allow. The public has also the power to disallow.

The President of these United States of America, to maintain which so very much blood has been shed, is much bigger than Lewis or any other man placed at the head of any labor organization.

Let them remember not to be dumb sheep to be led from good pasture into the "bad lands" by any such bell-wethers.

GRANT SHEPHERD.
La Plata, Md., March 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Yes, count me, alas, as one ready for the front line shock troops that may yet be needed to stem the advancing tide of an organized labor turned destructors of citizens' rights.

The sit-down strike, so-called weapon of labor, is a thinly disguised act of revolution. Yes, indeed, Lewis is wrong in stating that the public is on the side of the striking unions. Public opinion is against the striking unions and is now looking askance at all organized labor.

Thousands of men are ready to take over jobs of those not satisfied with reasonable arbitration. Officers of the law could take time off from making chalk marks on parked automobiles and protest the rights of those who want to work. It sorely tries a man's faith in his country when, at 36, with a good education, and with a family to care for, he walks from one "blind advertisement" to another without success. Meanwhile, organized labor sits down.

Lewis should listen to comments from both employed and unemployed white collar workers of intelligence, and he will wonder if weapons more deadly and warlike than sit-down strikes may be called for before he finishes his ambitious program.

OUT OF WORK.
Washington, March 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wonder if John L. Lewis realizes how much he is disliked, together with his selfish labor tactics, by the millions of unemployed?

There was some improvement in economic conditions; there was hope that, at last, business and industry would start the wheels turning so that there would be jobs. But it would be a brave business man today who would start any business.

The millions of unemployed would like a chance to co-operate with such leaders who could start things now in the way of new business. They are as much the victims of the selfish labor unions as is capitalism.

I begin to be sorry that I voted for Roosevelt and his gang. I am for that conservation which conserves. I am against the selfishness of the closed shop and all wanton tactics of the C. I. O. All the Communist papers are for the C. I. O. That should show what it is all about.

DISGUSTED.
Washington, March 24.

"Darkies" And The Court.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The much ado over Justice McReynolds' use of the term "darkey" in an informal semi-playful talk at a college fraternity meeting, is one more illustration of Mr. Pegler's "Puffers and Pouters" given in The Post of March 27.

Any Southern man, or any other, who has ordinary knowledge of Southern habits of speech, knows that the use of the term "darkey" is but as innocent in purpose to offend as the name "Pat," given jocularly to any Irishman. In "Old Folks at Home" the term is used and is sung lustily by the Negroes themselves.

But when Mr. Ginsberg, in The Post of March 27, proposes to search Justice McReynolds' record to discover if indeed he would be willing to protect "the poorest darkey" as soon as he would the man on Fifth avenue, your correspondent touches the very crux of the present discussion on the Supreme Court. With amazing absence of insight, Mr. Ginsberg assumes that if Justice McReynolds is sincere in his desire to protect the "poorest darkey" in Georgia, he will, perforce, decide every question presented to the Supreme Court where a Negro is involved in favor of the Negro. It is right here that proponents of the President's plan for a radical change in the court show their weakness. They continually assume that a judge is "liberal" if he decides with the President, and is otherwise if he decides otherwise.

And by the same reasoning, Mr. Ginsberg says that if Justice McReynolds is a friend of the Negro, he will decide in favor of a Negro in any case which involves a Negro. A wonderful court we should have in that case! This would call for a Supreme Court to be elected with each President, and be as subservient to his desires as we often see partisan Congresses. I resent the insinuation that any man is a "liberal" or otherwise, as a member of our highest tribunal, who votes, in interpreting the Constitution, as he thinks the case demands. To judge the members of the Supreme Court by how they voted in the Scottsboro case or any other, implies that the court may be "packed" by any President, if sustained by Congress, so that everybody will know just how a case will be decided.

Puerto Rico Affairs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to make reference to your editorial entitled "Flare-Up in Puerto Rico," published in The Post March 24. I desire to congratulate you for the very able and comprehensive way in which you have discussed the situation in Puerto Rico in connection with the recent deplorable disorders that occurred in Ponce.

There is no necessity or excuse for violence where freedom exists as it does in Puerto Rico. It is a very small minority, without any important standing among the masses of the people, who are trying to create a wrong impression with their unwise propaganda for independence. The people of the island have asserted their allegiance time and again to American ideals, and their heartfelt desire to continue as a permanent and integral part of the United States was clearly demonstrated during the last elections in November when the coalition of the American parties, upholding and maintaining these great ideals, won by an overwhelming plurality.

Protected by the Constitution of the United States for more than 38 years, absolutely free politically with all the civil rights and privileges of American citizens have brought our people to the realization that there is no such citizenship in the world as ours and that a few misguided citizens cannot force their opinions on the great majority.

Once more allow me to express my thanks for the fair manner in which you always have treated Puerto Rican affairs in your paper.

As Others See Us

Julien Brenda, writing in the Nouvelles Litteraires, Paris, as translated by the Living Age.

NEW YORK, on the pier—Scores of men are walking to and fro, carrying placards which read: "We are strikers locked out by the L..... Steamship Co. The men who have been hired in our places don't know their jobs. If you care about your safety, don't take these boats." The police do not raise the slightest objection.

So much freedom offends my French soul.

Food here is bad. Because it is not simple. Or rather because it is not definite enough. In France, when I ask for a sandwich, they bring me a sandwich. And that's that. Here they bring me besides—and more often than not as a part of the sandwich itself—a leaf of lettuce, the yolk of an egg, a slice of tomato. In France when I ask for lettuce they bring me lettuce. And that's all. Here they bring it to me covered with pimento sauce, which is not by definition a part of lettuce. American cooking—and, it suddenly occurs to me, the cooking of all countries, with the single exception of France—always includes what Peguy used to call "marginalia!"

One day the American dislike of strict interpretations proved to be very much to my taste. Just as we were pulling out of the station, the conductor told me that I was on the wrong train. I lost my head. He calmed me down, stopped the train and telephoned back to make sure that the next one would stop for me. Which was done. A French railroad employe would have thought: "This train is not going to stop anywhere but at the scheduled station, and once there this gentleman will have to shift for himself."

I related this episode to some Americans. They told me: "The man was sorry for you and wanted to save you trouble." Human solidarity, of which the Frenchmen know very little!

Washington—They took me to the White House. I asked: "How is it that there is no sentry posted in front of the residence of the Chief of State?"

The mirth of my companions, who are free men all!

Here they provide you with only the most necessary articles. In the largest hotels nobody turns the bed down for you. In Baltimore the chambermaid whom I summoned to pack a suit said to me, putting her hand on my arm (and laughing all the while): 'Is this what you wanted me for? You've got your nerve!"

This did not fail to shock me. Decidedly I am a dirty bourgeois. It is true that I neither like nor respect myself the more for it. One cannot be perfect.

Luxuries are very expensive. If I want to have my breakfast served in my room it costs me a dollar. I can have the same breakfast downstairs for much less.

Silence. I must love true democracy.

Cincinnati—Eight o'clock in the morning. I arrive at the station to take a train. I look for a restaurant such as we have in France. There is nothing of the sort here. Instead a large horseshoe at which everybody is seated side by side. The individualist in me bridles. I should have preferred a table to myself. I am given a cup of coffee, some sugar and cream, and toast. What more do I want? What would I have at my little table that I have not here? The necessity of ordering? The fawning of the waiter? The problem of the tip? What an ingrate I am! This automatic life is the intellectual's dream.

What a land for metaphysics: no history, no dungeons, no ruins!

One thing here enchants me. From coast to coast all the hotels of any pretensions at all are built on the same model. Everywhere the same piece of paper at the desk, the same fountain pen with which I write my name, on the ground floor the same barber shop, the same cafeteria where the same servant brings me the same glass of water, presents me with the same menu card, from which I choose the same meal for the same price. In every room there is the same bathroom, the same blinds, the same closet with the same hangers.

In France the men and women of society talk to me as equals. They exchange ideas with me, and consider their own worthy of at least as much attention as mine. They insist on thinking, like Moliere's Dorante, that the folks of quality know everything without learning anything. They mean to make one remember that they belong to a land where society people have names like Rochefoucauld, Saint-Evremonde, Sevigne; where intellectual values, even those of philosophy, from Descartes through Jean Jacques Rousseau to Bergson, reap no glory until they have been passed upon by the salon.

Here, nothing of the sort. Society says to the intellectual: "You speak to us of things on which you, unlike us, have reflected; you are committed by profession to mental work, work which we do only incidentally and unsystematically. We listen to you docilely, and with good will."

In the French salon, I compared thoughts; in the American, I teach. In the first, I [illegible] judges; in the second, pupils.

Fair Enough

Mussolini in Spain.

MUSSOLINI'S bold warriors are advancing rapidly to the rear in Spain, where they have gone up against major league pitching for the first time. It is often thus in the baseball business, and perhaps the Italian army, too, is just one of those training camp stars who look great in batting practice and knock a lot of home runs in the exhibition games, but fold up when the competition begins and presently land in the Sally League. The Duce has done everything that can be done for an army through pep talks and praise, and certainly no soldiers ever were given better tools for their work. He also gave them a practice war against a Class D club in Abyssinia, so as to boost their morale with a victory, although the Class D club was so weak that the Italians didn't get much real practice in the campaign. In fact, the valiant legions of the Duce were mostly bench warmers in that one, while native African soldiers did the fighting, but still it was the Italian army, and the boys were allowed to believe they had turned a lion inside out with their bare hands.

• • • •

THE ODD THING about the Italians' rapid advance to the rear is that this war in Spain was supposed to be a practice war, too, in preparation for the championship contests with Britain and France later on. The Spanish Communist army was merely a sandlot outfit at the beginning, for most of the Spanish regular army had gone over to the rebels, leaving the government comparatively few troops.

The army has since been stiffened with anti-Fascist volunteers from France and other countries, but socially, as you might say, it is not an army at all, for many of the soldiers have been fighting in their store clothes. An army deserving of social recognition by the Duce's dashing desperadoes should have uniforms at least, and, if possible, a snappy salute. So the Duce sends his invincibles against this pick-up team in a war that was intended as another easy workout, and the first time they meet any real action they are seen running the wrong way, which speaks badly for their sense of direction, to say the least.

Perhaps this is the tip-off on the spirit of the rank and file in armies which are composed of prisoners under the dictators. The poor people of Italy are not a bloodthirsty lot, but the soldiers had no choice when their time came to join up. They get some little pleasure out of the uniform and band music on their home grounds, but it is hard to believe that a poor peasant, mechanic or clerk would have much enthusiasm to give a leg or his life in a practice war and in the role of invader against men of his own kind defending their home soil.

Moreover, the private soldiers of the Duce do not even get handsome uniforms for their vanity, but fight in what you might call sensible clothes, the real gaudy effects being reserved for the officers, who are undeniably beautiful. Maybe the humble Italian in the ranks doesn't want to die for the Duce, after all, but finds himself in Spain against his will and with no desire but to return home and scratch the side of a hill with a hoe.

• • • •

WHATEVER the reason, the news is plain that for all the Duce's warlike clamor all these years and his threats against the peace of the whole world, his club had one foot in the bucket the first time it looked at reasonably good pitching, and hasn't even hit a loud foul to date. It is too early to pass judgment, but there is reason to start hoping that the conquering legions of Mussolini are on their way back to the bushes even before the season begins.

Now the Duce is threatening to produce some more riots around the British Embassy in Rome because the British papers referred to the licking in Spain as another Caporetto. John McGraw had a similar sensitiveness, and though he would hardly go so far as to promote a world war, he would start swinging furious lefts and rights to the face and body of anyone who called him Muggsy.

This puts the press and public of other countries in a delicate spot, for the resemblance to Caporetto is prominent, but to mention it may cause a great massacre. Yet it might restore a little sense in Italy and permit the world to go back to work. Italy has been a terrible nuisance for years now.

American Menace No. 1.

I take a chance anywhere any time.
I say "Phooey on speed laws!"
I have an idea I am an exception to all rules.
"Safety First Campaigns" are my favorite amusement.
Nothing doubles me up with laughter like a "Go Slow" sign.

• • • •

Sixty per hour is my idea of loafing.
What's the fun driving if you can't throw a scare into everybody?
I throw her wide open in heavy traffic.
I trust to luck and hope it won't be too good.

When I'm not breaking every law of safety in the book I am miserable.
Fifty per cent of my fun comes from frightening whoever is in the car with me.
I like to make panicky pedestrians take to the upper branches.
I love to see other autoists whiten and pull onto the sidewalks.
The sound of a crunching fender is my idea of sweet music.

• • • • •

I read all official police warnings on careless driving in a dark room, so I won't be influenced.
A "Drive Cautiously Week" gives me more laughs than the "funnies."
My ambition is to jump a surface car in motion.
Nothing cramps my style more than the realization that a motorist has heard my siren in time to escape me.

I drive faster coming back from an important mission than I do going to it, if that is possible.
I love the smell of hot brakes.
I chortle at "School. Go Slow" warnings.
The inventor of red lights is my idea of the world's most futile person.
I think a white glove on the upraised hand of a traffic cop is a salute, a welcome and an extension of the keys to the city.

I am aided in my inexcusable attitude by the attitude of my employers, who regard my antics as strictly okay.
It gives me encouragement to know that the heads of the institution, the members of the board and the doctors and internes are perfectly familiar with my tactics and do nothing about them.
It lifts me up to realize that, while I work for people supposedly interested in life-saving and health, they are in full and complacent possession of the fact that I kill and maim scores of people in this country every year, some of whom are the very people I am supposed to be saving.
I am one guy something should be done about.
I am the ambulance driver!

Baseball clubs, it seems, buy uniforms for their teams but make each player buy his own shoes. They even quibble, as illustrated by the Gehrig case, over what socks are worth to them.

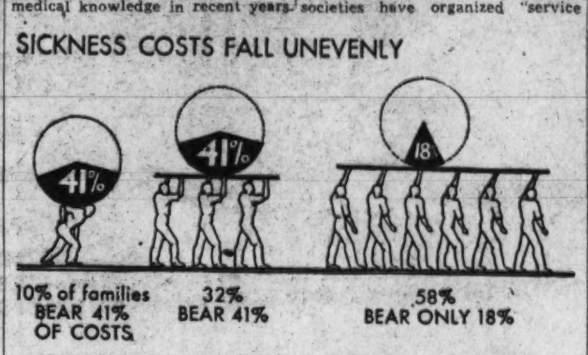
Dollars and Disease

Pamphlet Summarizes Findings Of Committee Investigating Medical Facilities Of United States Today.

EACH YEAR the people of the United States spend $3,500,000,000 on medical care and 10 per cent of the families in the United States spend nearly half of this sum. These facts are brought out in a pamphlet, "Doctors, Dollars and Disease," by William T. Foster, published by the Public Affairs Committee of Washington.

The pamphlet summarizes the conclusion of the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care, sponsored by the Twentieth Century Fund and the Julius Rosenwald Fund, which spent five years studying the medical, hospital and dental services available to the people in this country. The committee's report, and reports of other groups, brought out that, in spite of the great advance in medical knowledge in recent years the United States now has only half the medical care and a quarter the dental care required by satisfactory standards.



Its findings, in brief, follow:

The high cost of medical care is not the only reason why everyone does not receive adequate attention. Often the patient does not know what kind of care he needs or where it can be obtained. Then again American hospitals, clinics and other medical facilities are not well distributed geographically. There are more than a thousand counties in the United States which has no hospitals for general community use. In South Carolina there are 1,431 persons to every doctor and in California there is one doctor to every 484 persons.

YET $30 a year per person is now spent on medical work and $36 per person, if properly expended, would be sufficient to procure the benefits of recent advances in medicine for every citizen of the United States. This is as much money as was spent during one year in the depression on candy, cosmetics, cigarettes and chewing gum.

A combination of voluntary insurance, compulsory insurance and public medicine would go far toward alleviating the present distress and inequality of care. The American College of Surgeons believes that voluntary group insurance for the prepayment of hospital bills is the wisest way of assuring adequate medical service. The American Hospital Association is helping communities scattered all over the United States to start group hospitalization projects on a sound basis. The fee is usually about $10 a year, an additional $8 covers the subscriber's husband or wife and $6 more includes the entire family. This covers three weeks' hospital care in a semi-private room and includes most extras. The benefits do not include fees for attending surgeon or physician. They usually cover all accidents and illnesses admissable to a general hospital except workmen's compensation cases, venereal diseases, tuberculosis and mental diseases.

This principle of insurance is now used in over 60 cities (including Washington) in the United States and it can be extended to apply to group prepayment of doctors' bills. In Tacoma, Ore., and in som other smaller cities the county medical societies have organized "service bureaus." Each subscriber pays a specified amount a year to the bureau and his doctor and hospital bills are paid, regardless of the amount.

A second method that could be used to put proper medical and dental care within the reach of everyone is compulsory health insurance. A model bill has been presented in Congress and in a number of State Legislatures which provides that all workers earning less than $60 a week contribute to a plan supplying medical care for the insured and his family and cash benefits for the insured.

The patient has a free choice of physician and the administration of remuneration to physicians is left to the local medical group. The right to cash benefits is decided upon by public officials and the costs are borne by the employe, employer and Government.

Advocates of compulsoty health insurance in this country point to the success of the British system which began in 1911, but in spite of the general success of compulsory health insurance in Great Britain, it is open to question whether a similar system would operate well in the United States with its many different conditions.

Public health services supported by taxation now operate much more extensively than is ordinarily realized. A third of the hospitals for the care of tubercular patients and 95 per cent of the hospitals for mental and nervous diseases are owned and operated by the government. Health departments supervise milk and water supplies, regulate the spread of communicable diseases and grant licenses enabling physicians to practice medicine.

It is generally agreed that the State should continue to control the services now under its jurisdiction. How far that jurisdiction should be extended is one of the most vital questions before the medical profession and layman.

Growing Powers Of The Executive.

London.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS is vastly troubled over the growing powers of the Executive. Because they saw the prerogatives of the House being usurped by the Executive, Conservative members joined with opponents of the government and forced the attack until the government had to concede a select committee to review the matter.

The trouble came to a head over the government's proposals for dealing with the "special areas," where unemployment is highly concentrated. Controversy has raged for years over the appropriate remedies for the disorders of these depressed regions and always pressure from members has been for the government to do more than it was prepared to do.

Mr. Lloyd George has spent most of his latter years in shouting for something to be done for the unemployed. The Liberal and Labor party platforms are built mainly of planks for the complete reformation of the distressed areas. Even Edward VIII was rash enough to say he would see that something was done; and so it was, but not quite as he had hoped. Lord Nuffield weighed in with a trust fund of two millions for the benefit of the unemployed. And a week or so ago the government produced its own proposals, which in the view of all critics did not go far enough.

• • • •

THE MAIN INSTRUMENT of recovery was to build factories for rearmament in the "special areas," and hope the demand from armament factories placed elsewhere would bring prosperity to coal and steel industries in the regions of heavy unemployment. Other and secondary proposals were to establish trading estates and allow government loans up to two million pounds to help private factories set up on these trading estates. As one indignant Labor man put it, the government was generously proposing to spend pound for pound with Lord Nuffield!

The storm broke when the first step was taken by the government to pass its legislation. One of the jealously-guarded rules of the British system of government is that the power of initiating expenditures, either from the consolidated fund or from special appropriations, lies only with the Executive. The members of the House cannot inaugurate proposals which would involve expenditures of public moneys. This rule is embodied in Standing Order No. 63, which was adopted in the reign of Queen Anne, whose chief remaining distinction is that she is dead.

Accordingly, when a bill is to be presented to the House which will require the expenditure of public moneys, it must be adopted by the government and must be preceded by a financial resolution expressing the desire of the King and his government that money should be appropriated. Since 1922 it has been laid down by Standing Order No. 69 that when a financial resolution is being discussed no motion can be accepted for debate which would require a vote of the House. In other words, a financial resolution cannot be amended; it can only be accepted or rejected. Amendment can come only if the government voluntarily accepts criticism, withdraws its resolution and presents a new one.

• • • •

THE COMPLAINT of the House is that the government has recently drawn up its financial resolutions in even greater detail, until they have become as detailed as the bill to follow. They are no longer appropriations for purposes which may subsequently be debated and amended when the bill comes up. All the critics of the "Special Areas Bill" found that their proposed amendments were ruled out of order in advance, since the points they referred to had been embodied in the financial resolution.

The government was accused of deliberately framing its resolution so that subsequent debate on the bill would be stifled. The House saw itself becoming a mere rubber stamp, since, as the Attorney General admitted, its only remedy for a bill it didn't like was to throw out the government.

After seven hours of debate the government accepted the criticism to the extent of agreeing to appoint a committee of investigation; but the committee will not be able to do anything in time to permit the House to amend the "Special Areas Bill" unless further concessions are forced from the government in subsequent debate.

• • • •

THE CONTROVERSY does not concern only the House and the Executive. The civil service is part of the quarrel. The permanent staffs of the various ministries are eager to get their bills drawn up so that they can be presented to the House by the various ministers and made law as rapidly as possible. One method of hurrying up the procedure is to put as much of the bill as possible into the financial resolution, which can be passed by the House in one swoop.

The Lords have no power over money measures. A bill has to go through the long process of first reading; debate on second reading; reference to either a standing committee or to committee of the whole; report to the House and third reading. It must pass through the House of Lords, suffer possible amendment and be passed back and forth between the two houses until acceptable compromise is reached.

Only on money bills is the power of the Lords to amend curtailed; but whatever can be taken out of the bill and put in the resolution cannot be debated for amendment even in the House of Commons. So the pressure of the civil service is to short circuit Parliament and use the financial resolutions to increase the power of the bureaucracy. And the House doesn't like it.

Parsifal

By William Lyon Phelps.

On Good Friday.

On Good Friday every year there is performed in New York at the Metropolitan Opera House Wagner's last great opera, "Parsifal." It is a very long composition, and not, to my mind, so well sustained in genius as "Die Meistersinger" or "Die Walkure;" but there are two passages in it that reach a height of absolute sublimity. These are the prologue and the incomparably lovely music called the Good Friday spell. Both of these came only by direct inspiration and are the mysterious result of genius.

It is an interesting way to celebrate Good Friday by hearing this sacred opera on this particular sacred day; there is an additional solemnity and impressiveness rising from the occasion.

• • • •

There is one curious survival in this music-drama from the Mystery Plays of the Middle Ages. In the Middle Ages when the miracle or mystery plays were produced the three persons of the Trinity often appeared upon the stage; for the people of those times would have understood nothing of the Trinity if it had not been dramatically represented to them as three actual separate persons. God always appeared on the stage in majesty. The Second Person is the only one of the three who now appears in the Passion Play at Oberammergau. But in the Middle Ages the Holy Spirit was sometimes represented as a person and sometimes as a dove. Now, in Wagner's "Parsifal," toward the close of the final act, the Holy Spirit actually appears on the stage in the form of a dove, which is a distinct and direct survival of the custom everywhere in the Middle Ages.

• • • •

Whenever any great movement is started, political, social, or co-operative, it usually begins with a great banquet. I can remember many of these state affairs where the most distinguished people of the time were the guests of honor. How remarkable it is that over 1900 years ago a little group of peasants and fishermen were gathered together in an upper room and broke bread and drank wine with their Master; and from that quiet and simple supper came a movement that dwarfs all other movements in history. Today millions and millions of people take part in this commemorative feast, and on this day, Good Friday, it is more universally celebrated than any other event or person or movement in the history of the world.

Fie On The Fijis!

Sir Henry Milne Scott, K. C., is en route from the Fiji Islands, where he is a governing official, to tell London that the Fiji men are now "nature's gentlemen." As for cannibalism, that is "absolute buncombe," insisted the Britisher, stopping long enough in New York to set us right, too.

The Fiji Islanders elect their own representatives; they have no unemployment problem; they even balance their budget. Thus does another favorite fiction fall, like Humpty-Dumpty. Presently we'll be assured all wild men in Borneo are tame and no bring-'em-back-alive artifices can thrill us again—at least, until the next time.

Nanking Compromises In Crisis

Follows Tradition Of Orient In Trying To Quiet Leftist Protest.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

IN THE TRADITIONAL Oriental manner, the Nanking Government has resorted to an old-fashioned compromise to settle one of the most serious crises in its ten-year history. Faced on the left by a growing demand for resistance to Japan and a democratization of the government; pressed on the right by the moneyed groups and Japan, demanding war on communism, Nanking adopted a course which, like an American election platform, can offend no one.

Briefly, this policy, enunciated in mid-February by the Kuomintang, provided for the following:

Relations with Japan: Determination to resist external agression by force, if political means fail. The relations with Japan must be readjusted on "the basis of equality, reciprocity and mutual respect for each other's territorial integrity, so as to deprive bandits and puppets of their present reliance on external force (read Japan) and to respect the administrative and territorial integrity of China."

Communist proposal to cease civil war and to form a common anti-Japanese front: While affirming its desire to practice the greatest forbearance in domestic issues in order to achieve internal solidarity, the Kuomintang declared that the Sian rebels "championed certain slogans as a pretext to deceive the people."

"Especially at the present moment," the manifesto declared, "when the country is faced with serious foreign menace and when the nation's fate is in the balance, we must not be misled by fallacious talks of class struggle which will only destroy our unity . . .

"Although (the Communists) have recently appropriated the slogan 'resistance against foreign aggression,' past experience shows us that since 1924 when they were admitted to the Kuomintang to participate in the revolution, they have been working subversively against its cause rather than for it.

"Beginning from 1927, they have been employing terroristic methods to endanger the safety of the republic, thus undermining the strength of the nation which otherwise would have been employed in resisting alien invasion. They have also caused untold losse of lives and property of the people.

"Because of their innumerable crimes, it is impossible to take their word at its face value. The Kuomintang, ever with the welfare of the country and people at heart, shall see to it that sacrifices made by armed comrades and others during the bandit suppression campaign in the last few years shall not have been made in vain.

"No matter what formula we may adopt, our cardinal policy shall be to eradicate the Communistic scourge by our own efforts and to lay the foundation for national rejuvenation."

Agrees On Convocation Of People's Assembly.

DEMOCRATIZATION of the government: The Kuomintan decided to convoke the much-postponed People's Assembly, which will approve the draft constitution (much like the American) and elect the president, on November 12.

Rural and urban distress: No definite measures decided, except continued struggle with the Communists, who are held responsible for the country's poverty, and state support of native industries.

This part of the manifesto was apparently intended to reassure the moneyed gentry of the government's determination to protect them from "dangerous theories." Said the manifesto:

"* * * China must seek to solve her economic problems realistically and not be moved by mythical ideals and empty theories. One noticeable fact about China today is the prevalence of poverty. The so-called disparity between the rich and the poor is really nonexistent in China, the only difference being between those who are extremely poor and those who are a little better off. With a view to preventing future troubles, China's economic problems should be sought in equalization of land and restriction of private capital.

"The fighting spirit of the Chinese capitalists and their hardships have aroused the sympathy of many who are familiar with their difficulties. How could one be so heartless as to seek their downfall? For this would be tantamount to retarding the development of all new and infant industries and at the same time it would also mean a similar fate for the workers. * * *

"The nonsensical theory of class struggle shall never be tolerated because it will lead to social chaos. At the same time no great disparity between the rich and poor shall ever be allowed to happen, or it will result in future complications and difficulties. On this major principle depends completion of our present task of saving the nation."

Manifesto Drafted By Wang Ching-wei.

THIS ENLIGHTENING document was drafted by Mr. Wang Ching-wei, Kuomintang leader, who, theoretically, shares with Gen. Chiang Kai-shek the control of the government. About 12 years ago Mr. Wang headed the leftist faction within the Kuomintang. For this he was venerated by the intelligentsia, then, as now, radical.

But, with the passage of years, Mr. Wang's pink coloration rubbed off and he unobtrusively slipped into the position of the government's leading advocate of Sino-Japanese rapprochment. When, on November 1, 1935, he was shot by an anti-Nipponese gunman, Tokyo officially described it as an open attack upon Japan's friend.

Suffering from his wounds, Mr. Wang went abroad, while his adherents were either assassinated or relieved of their government offices. Gen. Chiang's dramatic capture in Sian brought Wang hurrying back, in the hope of assuming control of the government. The Generalissimo's "untimely" release, however, thwarted Mr. Wang's plans.

With all China in a hubbub over the Communist proposal to Nanking to form a joint anti-Japanese front, Mr. Wang immediately declared himself in favor of continued hostilities against the Red "bandits." Those who wanted to re-admit Communists to the Kuomintang, he said, "drink poison to quench their thirst."

Mr. Wang's personal statements and the manifesto were sound politics. He, as well as a vast majority of Nanking leaders, realize that China cannot wage war on Japan, nor even provoke the latter to action in North China. He also realizes that the groups which foot the government's bills are bitterly opposed to any accord with the Communists. By openly advocating the "extermination of the Red scourge," Mr. Wang made a bid for backing which he now completely lacks.

Gen. Chiang's Pledge To Sian Fulfilled.

GEN. CHIANG, forced by the terms of his release from Sian to side with the Popular Front, astutely kept himself in the background, permitting Wang to voice the government's views. Having promised the Sian rebels to present their terms for a Communist-Kuomintang rapprochement and active resistance to Japan to the government, he kept his pledge. In doing so he resorted to what the local Japanese papers called "political trickery." Instead of submitting these proposals as his own, he made them a part of an account of his experiences in the rebels' hands.

In a press interview last week, Gen. Chiang also favored freer speech and the release of political offenders—both of which were included among the rebels' terms. But in voicing these views, he made it plain that he was speaking as an individual, not as the uncrowned head of the government.

The Kuomintang's decisions, as publicly announced, formed, however, only a portion of the Chinese political jigsaw puzzle. Kept secret there were a number of other vital decisions, in many cases directly contradictory to the announced policies.

Nothing certain is, of course, known. But competent observers here believe that Nanking, seriously alarmed by the growing strength of the Popular Front movement, agreed to the Communist proposal to end its anti-Red punitive campaign. It is also regarded as certain that Nanking, succumbing to pressure exerted by groups ranging between the semi-Fascist southwestern generals and the radical National Salvation Association, consented to adopt a progressively sterner attitude toward Japan.

Signs are not lacking that the Nanking administration, hitherto strongly repressive, will slacken its restrictions on speech, press and association, and will release liberal leaders, imprisoned for assailing the government's alleged reactionary tendencies and vacillating policy toward Japan.

Distress Of Farmers Still Looms Large.

BUT NEITHER the announced nor the secret policies of the government can save it from a serious crisis toward which it is being drawn by inexorable economic, political and social forces. Absolutely nothing has been done to alleviate the unbelievable distress of the 350,000,000 of the rural population which must, sooner or later, lead to a revolutionary explosion. Consent to leave the Communists in peace in their own zone in the northwest can satisfy the Reds for only a brief while. Further concessions to the Communists will not be permitted by the generals, bankers and landlords, who form the main pillars of the Nanking government.

If no active steps are taken to combat Japan's ambitions, the government will face new uprisings in the northwest, southwest and in its own front yard in Shanghai. If active measures are adopted, Nanking will have to face the wrath of strongly armed, determined and ambitious Japan.

Finally, no democratic government is possible in China under the present conditions. Nanking has achieved its unprecedented successes only because its powerful military machine has been able to crush all opposition by force. Thus any steps toward a more democratic form of government must be hesitant, at best. This cannot fail to arouse new discontent, which can easily be blown by Nanking's foes into a fire of civil warfare.

there. Louis Koesney, who lives nearby, got there soon and helped me. I helped take out four bodies, then I got sick and had to quit.

"One girl had no legs at all. One man had a piece of the plane through his body."

Bourguignon said Bethel volunteer firemen arrived then and took up the work of removing the bodies.

He said the body of either the pilot or co-pilot was the only one thrown from the plane, and that he found it about ten feet from the wreckage.

"We could feel the pulse of one girl, but we could see she couldn't live," he said.

Eye-Witness Story.

Pittsburgh, March 25 (U.P.).—A graphic eye-witness account of the T. W. A. transport plane crash was given by Paul Ringer, 21, who was looking out of the window of his home at the time the big ship fell.

His story:

"I was standing at the window after supper. It must have been around 6:30. Suddenly I saw this plane overhead and there was enough light left to get a good look at it.

"Almost as soon as I noticed the plane, I saw that it was spitting fire. Then another plane appeared and kept flying around, while the first plane suddenly slipped into a nose dive and disappeared between some trees."

"I ran to a neighbor, Henry Matthews, and together we ran to the scene, about a quarter of a mile away, in a bottomland.

"We tried to cut across the fields and through the brush and a few officers were there even by the time we arrived.

"I never saw anything like that plane. It was smashed to bits. There wasn't any fire after the plane crashed.

"It didn't seem to hit any trees either on the way down—just dived straight down.

"Mr. Matthews, who was with me, said he counted 10 people in the plane that he knows were dead. He helped carry three of the bodies into an ambulance and then went home. He was sort of sick."

Killed On First Plane Ride.

New York, March 25 (A.P.).—Miss Mary Black, 32-year-old employe of the cashier department of Standard Brands, Inc., killed tonight in the T. W. A. plane crash near Pittsburgh, was taking her first plane ride to visit her sister, Miss Jessie Black, nurse at Michael Reese Hospital, in Chicago.

Death Followed Changed Plan.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 25 (A.P.).—A change of plans sent Frederick D. Lehman, 25, Harrisburg life insurance man, aboard the transport airliner which crashed at Pittsburgh tonight.

J. Harry Hunt, manager of the company which employed Lehman, said he had obtained a week-end leave of absence for a trip to Chicago, but that he had understood he did not intend to start until Friday morning.

Lehman, a graduate of the John Harris High School, Harrisburg, and Lebanon Valley College, had been employed by the company as a field clerk for two years.

His father, Lee Lehman, fell dead of a heart attack in July. Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Cora Lehman, and two sisters, Miss Ruth Lehman, of Harrisburg, and Mrs. Ottmer Beam, of Ardmore.

Director Fred D. Fagg, jr., of the Bureau of Air Commerce, tonight ordered the investigating forces under his jurisdiction to concentrate on Pittsburgh to determine the cause of the first airline disaster during his month-old regime.

Hush-Hush or Health?

Laboratory Diagnoses Vital In Treating Social Diseases

By Gerald G. Gross.

(This article is one in a series to acquaint citizens with the tragic neglect of the venereal disease problem in the District of Columbia.)

The success of any campaign against venereal disease depends largely upon the reliability of the laboratory where diagnostic tests are made.

A false "positive"—or "negative"—may have dire consequences.

During the fiscal year ended June 30, 21,918 Wassermann tests for syphilis and 11,478 smears for detection of gonorrhea were made in the Health Department's serological laboratory, which is under-manned, under-equipped and under-supplied.

Since July 1, the small staff has made 21,035 Wassermanns and it is estimated that the current fiscal year total will reach the 30,000 mark. The number of smear tests also will far surpass last year's total, more than 10,000 having been made already.

These thousands of specimens are sent in by the I street social hygiene clinic; the workhouse, reformatory, jail and other public welfare institutions, and many private physicians. Slightly less than one-fourth of the blood samples show "positive" for syphilis, but the smears run about 50-50.

Today's contributor is an ear, nose and throat specialist who tells how syphilis, that great ventriloquist, attacks those parts. His article, like those published previously and those to follow, was prepared with approval of the health committee of the District Medical Society and Health Officer George C. Ruhland. It follows.

Syphilis plays a most important role in diseases of the ear, nose, and throat. When one realizes that the universally prevalent custom of kissing is one of the commonest means of transmission of this dread disease, the importance of early diagnosis cannot be too strongly emphasized.

The primary lesion or chancre is an angry indurated sore which develops, after contact, from a small break in the mucus membrane or skin. It heals very slowly if untreated. The lips, tongue and tonsils are the most frequent locations of these sores. Transmission by means of eating utensils, glasses, cups, etc., is fortunately quite rare. Regulations governing restaurants and public drinking fountains are adequate and for the most part scrupulously observed. Nevertheless, infection from one of these sources has been observed and should be remembered.

Further along in the course of the disease other lesions develop which cause considerable trouble. Secondary lesions are characterized by the appearance of white patches on the inside of the mouth, most prevalent on the cheeks and tonsils. They are often undiagnosed, for they may cause little trouble to the patient.

Tertiary lesions are tumor masses, destructive of the tissu from which they grow; they may be found in the tonsils or in the nose, causing destruction of the nasal cartilage and producing considerable deformity, such as the "saddle nose."

Of all syphilitic lesions, however, the type producing the most permanent disability is the infection of the nerve of hearing. Syphilitic neuritis of the nerve may occur quite early in the course of the disease, and the importance of early diagnosis must, therefore, constantly be emphasized.

We must therefore stress the importance of educating the public to seek medical advice early and to prevent the ravages of syphilis. In its more modern form the treatment of this disease offers excellent prospects of complete cure in most cases, if it is administered early and patiently adhered to. The fact that one or two treatments often remove primary and secondary manifestations should not be allowed to fool the patient into a delusion that a cure has been effected.

Syphilis as it affects the skin will be described tomorrow by a Washington dermatologist.

Plane Crash At Pittsburgh Is Fatal to 13

Ten Passengers; Crew of Three, All Aboard Craft Are Reported Dead.

were reports it had circled the airport awaiting orders to alight.

In Chicago Jack Frye, president of T. W. A. said the ship, its engines and radio were in perfect mechanical condition at the time it left and the flight arrived over Pittsburgh airport on schedule.

Frye said Pilot Bohnet was an experienced aviator who had been employed by the company since November, 1932, and that First Officer Warwick had been employed since 1935.

The T. W. A. president added that investigators were en route to determine the cause of the crash.

Coroner Macgregor arrived as firemen from nearby Bethel removed bodies from the wreckage. He said he had learned nothing on which to base an explanation for the crash.

Explaining that there was no fire he said:

"The pilot must have turned off the ignition.

"We will conduct an inquest as soon as we gather enough information to permit an intelligent investigation," he said.

J. J. Shaw, chief of the Bethel Fire Department, said the bodies were "battered" and that the last of the 13 bodies was taken from the wreckage at 8:30 p. m. (E. S. T.).

The wings were snapped from the body of the once sleek plane. They dangled like the wings of an injured, giant bird.

The fuselage was a battered and crumpled heap, its metal dented and twisted.

The two motors lay at the front of the wreckage.

Hundreds of spectators milled about the scene. Many edged close for souvenirs.

Officials struggled with conflicting reports to determine a cause for the crash.

Dr. J. J. McLean, manager of the Allegheny County airport, said some inspectors told him they believed ice formed on the wings.

"They told me they saw ice on parts of the ship and expressed the opinion this had formed on the wings while it was descending from a height of 10,000 feet or more to within the visibility range of 2,400 feet," said McLean.

Others said they saw no ice on the wreckage. Wilkins said no ice formed on his ship.

State, county and Federal officials promised a speedy investigation of the tragedy, the third in the Pittsburgh district within a year.

The plane left Newark at 3:15 for Chicago and was to have stopped at the Pittsburgh airport at 6:25 p. m.

Only one official would comment. M. L. Cunningham, State inspector of aeronautics, said:

"The plane apparently was out of control. The throttles must have been closed before the crash."

Most observers agreed Pilot Bohnet had sufficient time to shut off the ignition, pointing out there had been no fire.

The plane crashed within sight of what might have been safety. Just down the slope in a small valley between the rolling hills was a level meadow. Some observers thought Pilot Bohnet might have been trying to make that spot.

But the plane turned end over end, as though out of control, then dropped to the earth as if a magnet pulled its shiny etal, body down.

Father Shot by Gun Taken From Boy 4; Condition Critical

Accidentally shot with a pistol he had taken from the hands of his 4-year-old son, Norman, jr., a few minutes before, Norman Burch, 4201 Prospect avenue, Brentwood, Md., was in critical condition at Sibley Hospital last night.

According to the story told police by Mrs. Margaret Burch, the child was playing with the pistol when she asked her husband to get the weapon and make sure it was not loaded.

Her husband took the gun, police said, and discovered a shell had been jammed in the chamber. Both parents were working over the pistol, trying to dislodge the shell, police said, when it exploded, the bullet striking the father under the heart.

Burch was rushed to the hospital by a neighbor, Robert Lee.

District's WPA Jobs Quota Cut As Idle Protest

Order Opening Employment List to 700 Persons in Need Revoked.

Hopes of 700 unemployed men and women of obtaining jobs with the local WPA were dashed yesterday when the Federal order liberalizing the District's work relief quota was revoked.

Last week after a picket line was thrown around the District Building following dismissal of 340 WPA workers from a completed project at Bolling Field, Federal officials increased the District's quota of WPA jobs from 6,400 to 7,400.

But yesterday Otto J. Cass, deputy administrator of the local WPA, received a telegram from David K. Niles, Federal deputy works administrator, informing him the District's quota for April has been revised and only 6,700 jobs would be allowed.

At the time he received the telegram, Cass had on his desk a report showing 6,700 men and women were working for the local WPA yesterday.

Cass said he had not received a full explanation of the revocation order, but believed it followed a reallocation of jobs in WPA Region 2, which embraces the District.

At the time the revocation order was received Cass had a waiting list of 1,130 men and women who have been certified as in need and eligible to receive WPA jobs.

In addition, District relief officials pointed out that there are 3,000 men and women in desperate need who have not been certified to the WPA rolls because of lack of funds to investigate their cases.

Fortune of Quints Fast Approaching $1,000,000 Class

Toronto, March 25 (Canadian Press).—The world-famous Dionne quintuplets soon will be in the millionaire class.

The little sisters, 3 years old May 28, already have received payments topping the half-million mark and those receivable will boost the total to $861,148.39.

The Ontario government announced today the babies have received $573,765.05 from 24 motion picture, advertising and industrial contracts, $543,174.33 of it since they were made wards of the King in June, 1935.

To be added to this are accounts receivable totaling $287,383.34. In the next few years, percentages from the sale of various products also will add an unestimated sum.

The largest single item in the quints' revenue was $300,000 from a film company for four motion pictures.

Driver Indicted In Auto Fatality

Edward L. Bennett, 39, Civil Service Commission employe, was indicted on a charge of manslaughter by the District grand jury yesterday following an investigation of the death of Mrs. Gladys G. Redman in January.

According to information, Bennett was driving his automobile on Florida avenue northeast, near the Columbia Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, when he lost control of the machine. It crashed against a tree and Mrs. Redman, a passenger in the back seat, was critically injured. She died two days later in Casualty Hospital. Bennett was confined to a hospital for several days.

Others indicted yesterday were:

Joseph Black, Kenneth A. Washington (two charges) and Vincent H. Samuels, housebreaking and larceny; Richard E. Lipscomb and Lorenzo McClendon, grand larceny; Robert Wheeler, joy-riding; Milford C. Snider, Mark A. Woodell, Joseph R. Lovelace, George W. Andre, William W. Scott and Joseph W. Petro, robbery; Jay D. Smith and Charles Williams, assault with intent to commit robbery; Raymond Golde, forgery and uttering, and Frank M. Rowley and Ethel Rowley, abortion.

Md. Motorists Lag Near Tag Deadline

Almost 150,000 automobile owners in Maryland will be without their 1937 tags on the deadline, April 1, it was indicated yesterday by Deputy Motor Vehicle Commissioner D. Marshall Schroeder.

He said only 190,000 licenses had been issued, leaving some 200,000 motorists who have yet to secure their tags.

Because of the holiday today and the half-holiday tomorrow, there are only 3½ days left to issue the licenses. Schroeder said it would be impossible to handle more than 17,000 applications a day, or a total of approximately 60,000 before the deadline.

Motorcycle Escorting Farley Injures Man

New Orleans, March 25 (AP).—A motorcycle escort of Postmaster General James A. Farley today struck and injured seriously a pedestrian, William Rub, 56.

The accident occurred while Farley was returning from a postoffice dedication in Gretna. The Democratic chieftain quickly left his official automobile to aid the injured man, who suffered a compound fracture of the leg. The motorcycle was ridden by Hide Campbell, a State highway officer. Neighbors of Rub said he was deaf and probably did not hear the motorcycle sirens.

Feather Thrower Presents Chicken To Lewis—Almost

Waving a dressed chicken by the neck, Woody Hockaday, alias "Chief Pow Wow," famous as a feather tosser, attempted to call on Secretary Perkins at the Labor Department yesterday, but was intercepted at the door by detectives.

The officers noted Woody's palm beach suit, enormous red necktie, and particularly his distinctive Indian headdress which was beautifully feathered, and decided to halt Woody. He protested he was going to show the chicken to Miss Perkins, after which he was going to present it to John L. Lewis for settling the Chrysler sit-down strike, but the law ignored him.

He was removed to police headquarters, where he informed officers, "You can't hold me long, because I have papers to prove I'm insane." This baffled officers only momentarily. They took him to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

G-Men Arrest 2 On Perjury Count

By the Associated Press.

J. Edgar Hoover said yesterday Federal agents had arrested Dr. J. W. Eisiminger and Charles V. Stuart, both of Oklahoma City, Okla., on charges of conspiring to commit perjury at a Federal court trial.

The charges were made, Hoover said, as an aftermath of Eisiminger's $150,000 libel victory over the Houston, Tex., Chronicle. The men will be removed to Houston.

The Government's complaint, filed at Houston last Thursday, also named Robert A. Lowry and Esca Milne, of Oklahoma City.

Lowry is in costudy of Oklahoma authorities, Hoover said, and Milne has been questioned. They too are to be taken to Texas, Hoover said.

Dr. Eisiminger's suit was against the Houston Chronicle Publishing Co., the Houston Retail Credit Exchange, Inc., and others, charged by him with publishing libelous statements about him.

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937

I have a friend out here who is a judge and once in a while, he invites me to sit on the bench with him. They brought one man in to court for beatin' his wife. She was a poor little meek thing and both of her eyes were black and her face bruised and her husband was a great big, self-satisfied lookin' "bruiser" and I was kinda glad when the judge said, "That fella won't be so satisfied with himself when we get through with him."

I'm proud to say that there's only one case down home where a man ever struck his wife and nobody blamed him much because his wife was three times as big as he was and she had hen-pecked him all their married life. The judge turned to him and says: "What in the world ever possessed you to strike your wife?" The poor little fella looked up at the judge meekly and he says: "Well, judge, she had her back turned, the fryin' pan was handy, and the door was open and I jest thought I'd take a chance!"

Mental Acrobat.

Raymond J. Nolan, of Interior's law library, is a mental jack-of-all-trades, a most astonishing person, indeed. And, further to flavor his personality, his mental gymnastics are no less astounding than his hobbies are engaging. A very curious combination he is.

Curious, we say, for this reason: Go into the library some day and ask Nolan about a remote case decision in a more remote law book and he will put his finger on it. You will say that a good librarian should be able to do this and that it proves nothing. Well, ask Nolan to spiel off the names of at least 100 countries. He will come through.

Ask him to tell you the names of all the world's rulers. He will do that. Ask him what a bashibazook is and he will tell you it's a Turkish irregular; ask him what a remora is and he will tell you it's an ocean-going hitch-hiker and will explain all about it.

He is, in fact, the encyclopedia of Interior. Just yesterday someone called wanting to know all about Virginia Island rum. Nolan went to his mind, rather than a book, and told all. "What are you, are bar keep?" asked his visitor. "No," Nolan says. "I'm only like the guy in the carnival; I just tell them, I don't always explain."

And further, someone came into the library the other day, thinking that the Mendelian law had to do with law books. "What cases do you want to know about? The —— family of Tennessee, the —— family of New York or the —— family of Arkansas?" asked Nolan. "I want the facts on the —— family of New York," said the visitor. Nolan rattled off the facts. You won't say that a good law librarian should do all this.

Now let's consider the hobbies of this curious personality that is Librarian Nolan. He doesn't hang on to hobbies like he hangs on to facts. Actually, he flits from hobby to hobby. Not so very long ago he took to making ship models and turned out some excellent Spanish galleons, Chinese junks and clipper ships. Then he sank the hobby in a sea of other interests.

The next interest was tropical fish and he assembled all sorts of guppies, placed tanks with aggregate capacity of something like 200 gallons in his house. A few of the fish still swim around there, but his interest went a-Gypsying to weaving. With his hands he built a loom of white oak and ran through the patterns that touched the fields from Indian to Sarawak. "I just wanted to see how it was done," he said explaining that he has two rugs for his pains.

Then he took up photography, then he studied Russian and now, at last, he has taken up the accordion, has mastered 30 popular pieces and is sweating over Peer Gynt Suite, which, he calculates, he will master within eight years.

* * * *

"There's no secret about my memory," he will tell you; "it's just that I have a very retentive memory; I simply remember what I read and hear." It first was discovered by Nolan himself. He was in the Marine Corps at the time (1919-1926) and filled that ancient and useful job of the sea lawyer. The sea lawyer is a Marine who acquaints other Marines with the regulations. It's all a very informal job. For example: If a Marine wonders what will be the consequences of a period of A. W. O. L., he consults the sea lawyer, who, familiar with the regulations, tells the Marine that he probably will go to brig for 10 days.

Laski Tells How to Save Democracy

British Lecturer Hits American System of Industry.

Steers Clear of U. S. Politics in Talk at Constitution Hall.

Three things are needed to save democracy in America, Prof. Harold J. Laski, professor at the London School of Economics, told the 3,000 persons who last night attended his second Bronson Cutting Memorial Lecture at Constitution Hall. Those things, he said, are political reorganization, industrial reorganization and a sense of the interdependence between America and the rest of the world.

Laski said one of the most urgent tasks in America is the application of democratic principles in industry.

When the Englishman opened his lecture it was with an announcement he intended to steer clear of current political issues in the United States. This promise he kept fairly well.

Cites Constitution.

One slight digression from this was his statement that:

"Is it not possible that if the Constitution is regarded not as a road but as a gate that the march forward may be inhibited at a time when the march forward is essential?"

Again in his address he admitted being on dangerous ground when he said he believed an "excessively legalistic interpretation" of things seems to be present in America.

The audience answered with applause and Laski continued, saying, "When men begin to suspect the equal operation of judicial procedure, this is an index there is something wrong with the body politic."

In regard to industrial reorganization, the speaker also stated there must be recognition that "collective bargaining is an inescapable principle of civilized states." There was applause.

A portion of the lecture was devoted to a plea for academic freedom.

Saying the past few years had seen this principle attacked in the United States in a series of incidents "ugly in origin and devastating in effect," Laski stated:

"The only obligation of the teacher is to bring the truth to those he serves, no matter where it may take him or no matter where it may take the United States."

Laski said he did not mean the United States should join the League of Nations when he spoke for an understanding of the interdependence of nations.

"West Europe must first make a League of Nations worthy of your membership," he said.

Seeks "Insight."

What America must realize, he declared, is that the fate of America and Asia is the fate of America—that America must watch Europe and Asia with "sympathetic insight."

As at his lecture Wednesday night Laski pointed to England as the hope of democracy in Western Europe, so last night he pointed to America as the hope of democracy in the world.

Only in this country and in Soviet Russia, said the lecturer, is there sufficient vitality, power for experimentation and freshness of view.

Americans, he said, "still have the opportunity to be the masters, not the subjects" of their civilization.

"America has a chance to remake, re-energize and remould democracy," the speaker asserted.

The American corporation and the American businessman were subjects for attack by the economist. He said that 100 years ago de Tocqueville warned America against the growth of a manufacturing system the owners of which would become an aristocracy and in which the relation between master and man would no longer be partnership.

Laski asked his audience if this prediction has come true. He asked if the sense of responsibility of owners has changed to a responsibility to the attainment of wealth. He cited the following statements made in America.

"I propose to run my business as I choose."

"I am not in business for my health."

Laski, who spent four years in America when he was a young man and who knew Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, termed the great liberal "not only the greatest American, but the greatest man I have had the privilege to know."

Laski was introduced by Senator Robert M. La Follette, who acted as chairman. When the address was completed there was a question period of about a half an hour.

The Englishman was asked, "Does communism exist in Soviet Russia?"

His answer:

"The man at the head of the Communist Party in Russia, Josef Stalin, has never tired of insisting that communism does not exist in Soviet Russia. Who am I to contradict Stalin?"

A questioner asked if the lecturer believed democracy had a better chance for survival in the United States or in Russia.

Laski declined to answer, for two reasons, he said: First, because if he said in the United States his statement might be interpreted as flattery; second, he wanted to stay in the United States until April 25 and wants to visit this country again.

Another questioner wished to know if the lack of an aristocracy in this country would be of aid in the preservation of democracy.

"I am afraid you exaggerate the absence of an aristocracy in the United States," Laski said. "I lived for four years in Boston."

A final question was a request for a prediction which will disintegrate first in America, capitalism or democracy.

Laski answered he "would not buy the chances of capitalism" if the American people willed to save democracy.

Owner of Cemetery for Dogs Denies 'Desecration' of Flag

Richard C. Birney, owner of Aspin Hill Cemetery for dogs, shown at the grave of Rags, World War hero dog. Rags' grave would be unmarked by a flag if a resolution of the Cissel-Saxon American Legion Post were made effective.

Legion Charge 'Burns Me Up,' Marylander Rages; Says Army Officer Placed Stars and Stripes on Grave of 'Rags,' War Hero.

Richard C. Birney, owner of Aspin Hill Cemetery for dogs, dug his heels into the soft earth near the grave of "Rags" late yesterday afternoon and said: "That burns me up."

"Desecration!" Birney said into the teeth of a big wind blowing through the pines. "That burns me up."

He was talking about the resolution introduced by Thurman C. Metcalf into the channels of Cissel-Saxon American Legion Post, a document holding that the American flag was being desecrated by flying from the graves in Aspin Hill Cemetery. The resolution didn't say Aspin Hill Cemetery, but it named "an animal cemetery in Montgomery County." It spurred the legion post into a protest to the Secretary of War. And, incidentally, copies will be sent to the Montgomery County Council of the legion and to D. A. R. chapters.

Late yesterday afternoon Birney, a florid-faced man with a ready tongue, stood among the graves of something over 2,500 dogs. Regarding his cemetery, he was aware only at the time that it was considered as third best in the United States. Looking about, he could see the wreaths on the graves and feel the peace of a late afternoon countryside. He knew nothing of the resolution.

"Well, I've been here about 15 years," he said to the countryside at large, "and I've seen a lot of things—I've heard a lot of things—I've seen them faint and fall out on the ground, but I never heard any such mess as this before."

The cemetery owner's indignation mounted as he talked.

"Now," said Birney, "you've taken me by surprise; you've certainly come here and caught me off guard, to say the least, and I ask you if you see any desecration around here? Do you see any flags here, except those three new flags on the grave of Rags, the World War hero? Now, look at those flags. They're brand new and were put there by Mrs. H. H. Brokaw, and that wreath was put on Rags' grave by Mrs. Brokaw."

"And furthermore, I never have put a flag of any kind on the grave. The first flag ever put on Rags' grave was put there the day he was buried, in March, 1936. That dog went all through the war with the First Division, was shot and gassed and was decorated three times. Well, he was buried here and an Army officer himself stepped out of a car and placed the first flag that ever was placed on that grave.

"If they want to do something about this cemetery, why don't they help me raise some funds, as I've got a mind to do, to place a real monument on Rags' grave? But they never even come out here.

"Desecration! That's the best one I ever heard—don't you know, if anybody desecrated a flag out here those good ladies who have their pets here would get behind it with shotguns. If they monkey with me out here they're going into court and prove some desecration."

The legion's resolution held that flags and withered flowers were cast off down into a gully at the cemetery. Flags decorated the graves of poodles, it is said. "What kind of gully?" asked Birney. "Do you see any flags in any gullies here?"

In the meantime, authorities said regulations do not embrace the use of flags on the graves of animals, and it was not known whether the law had been flouted in Aspin Hill Cemetery.

It was late in the afternoon when he left the cemetery to walk through a broomstraw field toward his house. A half dozen or more fancy-bred dogs, which Birney boards, frisked about his heels, but he paid them no heed.

Compromise Up in Juvenile Court Action

Lawyers, Social Workers Wage 2-Hour Battle at Senate Hearing.

By James D. Secrest.

A compromise on the controversial District Juvenile Court bill appeared likely yesterday after a two-hour battle between lawyers and social workers before the Senate District Committee.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, author of the Senate bill, indicated a willingness to accept a new amendment that would eliminate the corporation counsel, but make provision for substituting an attorney or commissioner not responsible directly to the juvenile judge.

Chairman William H. King said he will call an executive session of the committee as early as possible to act on the measure. The meeting may be held tomorrow, he said.

With Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal and a bloc of lawyers aligned against a throng of social workers, the witnesses argued at length over the provision of the bill as it passed the House and the revised draft written by Seal.

Fear for Adults.

The fight centered about the authority granted to the juvenile judge by the House bill, which the social workers wanted approved intact. Seal and the lawyers insisted that it gives the judge too much power and lacked proper safeguards for children and adults who may become involved in juvenile cases.

Under the proposal suggested, a lawyer or commissioner would be recommended by the juvenile judge but would be appointed by the District Commissioners. The House bill gives the appointive authority to the court, while the Seal draft eliminates the commissioner and places the power to initiate proceedings in the corporation counsel's office.

John E. Laskey, former United States attorney, was chief spokesman for the social welfare group. He stanchly defended the bill and stated that the present juvenile law is antiquated. He was aided by Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department; Francis Hiller, of the National Probation Association; Huston Thompson, former special Assistant Attorney General; Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Woman's Police Bureau, and Wilbur La Roe, jr., of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Sullivan Active Opponent.

George E. Sullivan, speaking for himself, and Leo P. Harlow, of the District Bar Association, were chief spokesmen for the lawyers.

Sullivan attacked both the original and the revised bill and asserted that the present law is adequate. He said that any of the desired benefits could be obtained under the present act.

Senator King asked him to submit a brief analyzing the present law as Senator Copeland grumbled against "legalistic inquiries."

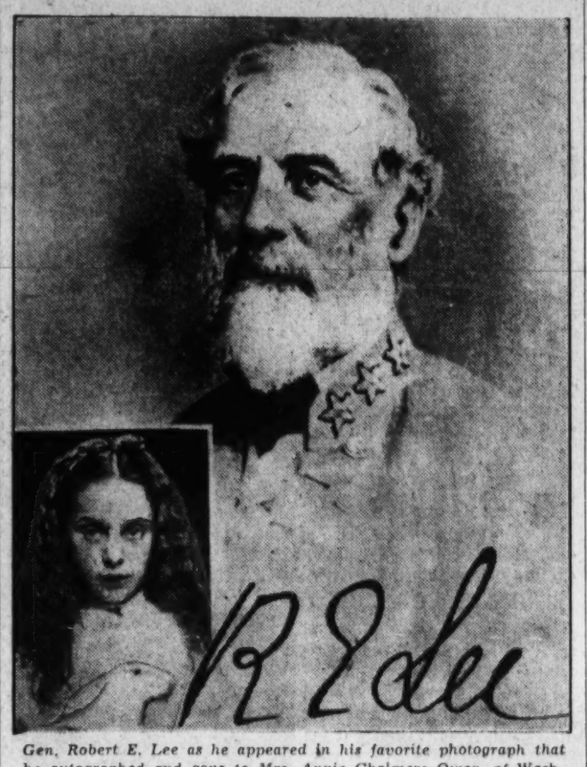
Harlow said members of the bar were in general agreement with Seal's revision, but he offered some minor amendments. In a final plea he urged that "motherly women with children of their own be mixed with the social workers."

Thompson, in explaining how a similar law has operated in Colorado, said "not a lawyer in Denver today would go back to the old system."

Much of the discussion among the Senators had to do with possible cases of serious crime, such as murder, being performed by youths of 17 or thereabouts.

Chairman King and others questioned the advisability of permitting the court to decide whether or not to act in such cases or to transfer it to the United States court.

Pictures Produced to Prove Lee Has Been Cheated of Star



Gen. Robert E. Lee as he appeared in his favorite photograph that he autographed and gave to Mrs. Annie Chalmers Owen, of Washington, when Mrs. Owen was a girl of 9. Of particular interest are the three stars on the general's collar. The inset shows Mrs. Owen when she was Annie Chalmers, of Lynchburg, Va.

Autographed Photograph of Southern Leader Given to Elderly Woman Shows Insignia of Confederate General.

While the Government yesterday officially dropped the issue of the two stars on Robert E. Lee's coat lapel—saying that stamp collectors must reconcile themselves to two stars instead of the three they claimed Lee was entitled to—two persons, one with professional and the other with sentimental interest, came forward to protest and demonstrate that Lee had been mulcted out of one star.

The person with sentimental interest was an elderly woman, Mrs. Annie Chalmers Owen. She brought to The Post a picture of Lee that the general placed in her own hands when she was a 9-year-old girl in Lynchburg, Va. Three stars were on the coat collar.

The person with professional interest was August Dietz, of Richmond, Va., who contributed the picture from which the postage stamp face, and incidentally the cost collar, of Lee was photographed. If the general was demoted to the rank of a lieutenant colonel, by the dropping of a star on the stamp, it was the work of the engravers and not the result of a faulty photograph, he said.

Dietz said he never had seen a photograph of Lee in uniform that did not carry three stars.

Would Avoid Controversy.

Mrs. Owen said she would like to remain out of the stamp controversy, but, she said, it was clearly evident now that the question was in the air, that Lee did wear three stars.

So she brought out the photograph that Lee had given her those long years ago in Lynchburg. Aging people have dreams; the years work tricks on their memories, but here was Lee's signature in ink that the years hadn't faded out. And clearly yesterday Mrs. Owen recalled that it was near Easter time—perhaps near the year of Lee's death, that he came to Lynchburg, not so far from Lexington, to attend an Episcopal Church meeting.

Mrs. Owen, Annie Chalmers then, recalled standing by a table and being spoken to by Lee. Lee was a friend of her family's, but at this time was a guest in the home of William Murray, who was an uncle of Senator John W. Daniel's wife. A few days later, Mrs. Owen recalled, Lee had dinner at her house. But clearly she stood by the table and received the photograph, which the general said was a favorite with him, and also a promise of a lock of his hair and a button from his coat the next time he saw her. But he died before he could keep the latter promise.

She has kept the photograph through the years and only brought it out because of the controversy about the stamps. She carried it with her, probably, on some of her travels, when she went about the country with her husband, Col. William C. Owen, who was in the Medical Corps and was one time curator of the Medical Museum. Mrs. Owen, in other years, wrote historical articles for newspapers and magazines.

Meantime the stamp controversy is definitely done so far as the Postoffice and Bureau of Engraving departments are concerned.

5th Regiment At Roosevelt Scores Again

Captures First Place in High Schools' Drill Competition.

Roosevelt High School's success, so much in evidence in the battalion contest last Monday, is still going strong. For the second successive year, the Fifth Regiment won first place yesterday in the regimental competition, in which six District high schools participated. The event took place in the Central High School Stadium, and was in charge of Col. Wallace M. Craigie, U. S. A., professor of military science and tactics, Washington High School Cadet Corps.

Second place in the contest went to the First Regiment (Central), commanded by Lieut. Col. John C. Marzolf. The Fourth Regiment (Western), under Lieut. Col. John Cronwell, ranked third. The judges were the same as for the battalion competition last Monday—Capt. James Regan, jr., and Lieut. Forrest Caraway, U. S. A.

The prizes were presented to representatives of the Fifth Regiment by Dr. Harvey A. Smith, assistant superintendent, District of Columbia schools, as soon as the judges' decisions were announced by the cadet colonel, George Flather. A gold medal went to Lieut. Col. Adelbert Christy, who commanded the winning regiment. A silver cup and a silver flag were given to the Fifth Regiment, to the tune of cheers and throat-splitting cries from a crowd estimated at 6,500. A gold medal also was given to Maj. Sidney Rosendorf, commander of the Second Battalion, Fifth Regiment, which won first prize in last Monday's contest. A silver cup and silk flag went to the battalion as a whole.

The captain of the Roosevelt Band that won first rank in the competition on Monday, Lawrence Richardson, was presented with a gold medal. His band was awarded a silver cup. A gold medal also was given to the drum major, Don Collier. The latter presentation was made by Zeb T. Hamilton, Americanism officer of Bunker Hill Post, No. 31, American Legion.

Roosevelt added still other stars to its crown of victory, as Adelbert Christy, captain of the military map problems team of the Fifth Regiment, stepped forward to receive from Dr. Smith a gold medal for winning first place in the map problem test held recently at the Franklin School. The "Colonel Craigie" silver cup went to the map problems team.

A snappy show from first to last, the drills started at 3:20 p. m. and continued for exactly two hours. Central High School (First Regiment) was on the field first, Roosevelt was on last. Western, McKinley and Woodrow Wilson paraded in the order named.

Each part was the same as the one before; and each was entirely different from any other. The bands came on the field from the east end; the regiments marched on from the west. In each drill, there was the line-up, the issuance of orders, a brief interlude of shuffling about, and then the final command to "Pass in review!" before the regimental staff and the grandstand. Meanwhile, each band behind its baton-twirling leader had marched and countermarched up and down the field. The same routine for every regiment; no two regiments carrying it out exactly the same way.

Johnny Shaw's Rhumba Tunes Entice Dancers

Madrillon Orchestra Woos Couples Dubious About Spanish Music.

By Chanticleer.

If you've ever heard Johnny Shaw and his orchestra go to work on a rhumba at the Madrillon you'll understand this a little better. Last Tuesday night a young couple resisted the first two or three of Johnny's South American tunes but one finally got 'em. Up they got and amid the cheers of the customers, put on as sweet a rhumba as you'd ever want to see.

Naturally enough, this Shaw outfit has to be good on the Spanish things. Host Peter Borras looks most kindly on Spanish food, music, art and anything else Castilian. He should. He came from Spain to this country.

There's spring in the air and spring in the manly bosom of Sande Williams, who has been on tap at the Carlton's El Patio for come now these last seven months. Sande has been around for a long time, considering the fact that ork leaders and their trusty men are more or less itinerant. And to demonstrate how pleased he is at the sustained welcome given him by Washington, Sande has taken "Welcome, Sweet Spring Time" out of the files, dusted it off and is really putting it on.

Art Warren is another who goes in for smart tangos and rhumbas. And for this type of moosicks he uses a funny gourd on which is scraped a two-pointed pin, and some dinguses called claves—two round sticks, solid, which are "played" by holding one in the palm of the hand while the other is tapped on it. Maestro Warren and his tangos can be found just about any night you wish at the Wardman Park's Metronome Room.

Tonight marks the debut of three stars of ability in the Shoreham ballroom. Josephine Huston, who appeared at the Earle inauguration week, is present for two days only. Charming young person and a charming voice. Marjorie Enters and Phillippe Borgia, dancers, already favorably known to Washington supper club audiences, are the other two bright spots. They were introduced not so long ago at the Heigh Ho.

Springtime also is official now at the Lotus. Featured are the Paul Florenz girls, Diane and Duval, novelty adagiasts (with a veil of mist number); Troy and Lynne, with plenty of fancy stepping, and Henry Nestor, the singing cop. Also Evelyn Knight and Al Norton and Bill Strickland and his orchestra.

Eddie Elkins, now back at the Pall Mall Room, is broadcasting daily for the Columbia network. Gosh, that theme song he uses is enough to melt a stern maiden's heart. Don and Sally Jennings are presenting sophisticated dance routines in the nightly floor shows.

The Cocoanut Grove is going quite balmy inside as a result of the weather on the outside. Palm trees really wave in the soft breezes in this after-darkery. The Roxeyettes come to the Grove beginning

At Cocoanut Grove and Madrillon

Raoul and Virginee are dancing at Cocoanut Grove this week, demonstrating there are still plenty of new things in the way of comedy and ballroom routines. Below, Johnny Shaw, maestro at Peter Borras' Madrillon.

tonight and just to keep things interesting a new master of ceremonies is to be introduced and a torch singer who stands 6 feet 4 in her sock feet. Raoul and Virginee are on hand to show that all the niffties possible in ballroom and comedy dances haven't been presented yet. They've got a few of their own.

All this talk about Easter clothes has given Johnny Rice an idea for his band, down at Brinkley's. He's decided to have a different dress for the band every week. Nice idea—particularly for the costuming folks.

"I might have known I'd see some old familiar face," said the young gentleman at the Hi Hat the other evening. "Everyone seems to week-end here." And there's a lot of truth in that, too. Russell Con, Hi-Hat boss, thinks the Board of Trade ought to do something with the idea.

Easter Sunday will be the occasion for introduction of a whole menu full of special Russian deserts at the Russian Troika. Mrs. Hamilton got the recipes from the entertainers—who you must know by this time are Russian Russians. Two shows nightly—8:30 and 12 midnight.

On the Air Today

Among the program changes taking place at this time, following the seasonal course of events, is that affecting the Gladys Swarthout broadcast. The G. M. Concerts, now heard Sundays, at 10, WRC, move April 4 to WMAL, at 8. The full hour thus opening up Sunday nights gives the Swarthout program an opportunity to shift from Wednesday night to the favorable Sunday night audience and also to gain half an hour—meaning that it now is heard at 10:30, which is a bit late for many listeners.

Also, on April 6, "Husbands and Wives" shifts to 8 o'clock from 9:30 on Tuesdays. "Universal Rhythms" shifts from Friday nights to Saturdays, at 7, effective April 10.

The present daytime program, "Hour of Charm," now heard Mondays at 4, WRC, changes to 9:30 p. m., Mondays, effective later in April.

Noted at the local studios: Charles Godwin, WJSV announcer, confirms the old one about trouble running in threes. Within the last week Goldwin has been informed by telegraph that (1) his mother-in-law was so ill in Oklahoma City that it was imperative for Mrs. Godwin to come to her bedside; (2) his mother had been taken to the hospital in New Orleans; (3) Al, his brother, had been taken to a Hartford hospital with a bad case of food poisoning. Godwin has been carrying a chart of the progress of his patients but reports all are "doing satisfactorily" . . . "Animal announcer," Jim McGrath, of WMAL, will tackle an interview with a water buffalo today (WRC, at 12:45). McGrath grappled with a snake on the air last time.

Features today:

"Hymns of All Churches"—Story of Crucifixion and Ascension will be told in hymns, WJSV, 10 a. m., with Joe Emerson.

From Franklin Park—Good Friday service with Rev. Charles A. Hart, speaking on "Meaning of Good Friday." WMAL, at 3:30. At 4:30, from same point, WJSV, will air talk by Dr. Robert Slavin on "Seven Last Words."

Boston Symphony—In first part of "Passion According to St. Matthew," WMAL, at 4:30. With oratorio singers and Dr. Ernst Wolff at harpsichord.

Lawrence Tanner—Keeper of archives and vestments at Westminster Abbey, by short wave on subject of coronation, WJSV, at 6.

"Call It A Day"—"Hollywood Hotel" presents prevue with Olivia de Haviland, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter and Roland Young, WJSV, at 9.

Here and there: Everything is set for Mrs. Roosevelt's new series. The time and place will be WMAL, at 7:15 p. m. Wednesday nights, beginning April 21 . . . The Eton boys come to Washington for a week's stand at the Earle starting April 2 . . . "Five Star Final" has been renewed for another year, calling for five nightly quarter-hour broadcasts and one-half hour on Sundays . . . Somebody has said that radio has lent a new note to romance. Now when the hero kisses the gal he doesn't look to her for approval—but at the control man in the engineer's booth! . . . The American Dahlia Society has named a new one in honor of Don Wilson. World Air Mail Visioned by Burke

Air mail service extending around the world was visualized yesterday by Postmaster Vincent C. Burke in a talk before the Cosmopolitan Club at the Carlton Hotel. Mr. Burke said that both Houses of Congress have agreed to finance test flights between New York and Southampton this summer, leading to establishment of a transatlantic service and that Pan-American Airways is planning to extend its service to China within a few weeks.

Introduced by Edward W. Gainor, of the forum committee, Mr. Burke cited the steadily increasing receipts at the local office, and said Washington has the third largest postoffice in the United States, being led only by New York and Chicago. Philadelphia and Boston, he said, can battle it out for fourth and fifth place. The receipts last year, he declared, were $7,300,000 and indications point to receipts in excess of $8,000,000 this year. These receipts are aside from the great national business of the Government.

The Washington postoffice, he also pointed out, is one of the largest banks in the city with 31,000 depositors and deposits of $8,200,000 in its Postal Savings Bank.

Miss Wong Confers On Extortion Note

Los Angeles, March 25 (AP).—Anna May Wong, beautiful Chinese actress threatened in an extortion note, conferred with District Attorney Buron Fitts today in an effort to aid investigators.

Meanwhile, Federal and county detectives began a process of elimination of "certain persons" in their search for the person who threatened Miss Wong and David O. Selznick, motion picture producer. Fitts has taken personal charge of the inquiry.

In the letter to Miss Wong the writer boasted that it was he who had wounded Fitts in an ambuscade March 7.

Mrs. Ely Culbertson on Contract

Side Suits Come First.

Many of the most harmless looking deals provide the most trouble. The contract of four spades, in the hand below, was a very normal one. At first glance it appeared to South that he had no problem at all. But he made his contract only because he carefully followed the maximum "Find out about your side suits before you touch the trumps."

West opened the ten of hearts, and South won with the Ace. A low club to the King dropped East's Jack. This ominous sign of bad distribution put declarer on his guard.

He returned a low club from the dummy, and East properly discarded a low heart. South won with the Ace of clubs, and returned the ten of clubs. West played low, and dummy discarded. East trumped with the deuce of spades, and cashed a heart trick. Next, he switched to the King of diamonds, and dummy won with the Ace.

Only at this point did declarer judge that the time had come for trump leads. He therefore cashed the Ace and King of spades, leaving East with the singleton Queen of trumps. Now he led the nine of clubs, and the defenders were helpless. If West covered with the Queen, dummy would trump. Even though East could overtrump, South's eight of clubs would be high and South could take the rest of the tricks. If West did not cover with the Queen of clubs, dummy would discard again and East could take his Queen of spades whenever he liked but could never win more than that one trick.

Tomorrow's Hand.

Columbia Broadcasting To Increase Capital

New York, March 25 (AP).—Stockholders of the Columbia Broadcasting Co. at their annual meeting today ratified a proposal for increasing the authorized capital stock to 1,500,000 shares of class "A" and 1,500,000 of class "B" stock and exchange of the present $5-par shares into two shares of new $2.50-par.

An increase in the board of directors from 10 to 14 was also approved.

Reich Asserts Pope Aided Its Enemies

Berlin, March 25 (AP).—Nazi Germany, in semi-official retort to Pope Pius' encyclical letter accusing the Reichs government of breaking its concordat with the Vatican, said today the pontiff had played into the hands of Germany's enemies.

The Deutsche Diplomatische Korrespondenz, organ of the foreign office, was the medium for this expression. It said the encyclical was "neither happy nor purposeful" and added: "Within Germany it must lead to the conclusion that its purpose is to make one section of the German people distrustful of, or inimical to, their government."

A Man of Iron—Stomach.

Schaerding, Australia, March 25 (AP).—A metallic idyl: Young farm hand, spurned by the blacksmith's red-haired daughter, swallowed something every time she said no. An operating surgeon found 66 pieces of metal in the patient's stomach, including nine hairpins, seven nails, two screws and a pocket knife—2 pounds, net. The peasant had hoped to continue the diet until the fair lady changed her mind.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man Friend Who Supported Girl Through Broken Engagement Now Avoids Her; She Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a college bred business woman 27 years old. One year ago I was engaged to be married to a young man whom I very deeply loved. He was from a Western State and was brought here by one of the New Deal agencies. We became engaged after four months' acquaintance. We were to be married the following June. In April, he was called home by the most unexpected death of his father, a well-to-do professional man. In settling his father's estate, he renewed a school-day friendship with an old sweetheart of his, who was employed in his late father's office, and they decided they had been in love with each other all along. He wrote me a desperately contrite letter, asking to be released from the engagement. Naturally, I let him go. They were married the following August, and they now live in that Western city, as he took over his father's practice.

* * * *

But at the time our engagement was broken I was nearly prostrated. I was forced to take a month's leave of absence from my work. While I was away, my ex-fiance returned here to wind up his affairs and, hearing of my illness, begged his former roommate to look after me when I returned. This the latter proceeded to do in the kindest way imaginable. He called me at the office a few days after my return and asked me out to dinner. That was the beginning of a new lease on life for me. During the following summer, we saw each other nearly every day, either for lunch, for a late afternoon show, or for dinner.

* * * *

I was not his only girl, for he had several very close women friends. But he seemed to take a great interest in me, probably out of pity, and also, maybe, because I am a rather attractive person. Anyway, I grew to depend on him a very great deal. By the following autumn, I was in love with him. But I carefully guarded my secret. At no time, even until now, have I ever betrayed my feelings, so far as I know. Rather, I have affected an attitude of indifference to men. My feelings had been so hurt by the other man's betrayal that I decided never again to give a man another chance to hurt me in the same way.

* * * *

But to get to the point of my problem. Around the first of December last this man began to call me less frequently. Why the change of attitude I don't know. Whereas formerly he had gotten in touch with me some time during the day, now two or three days would pass before I would hear from him. Then he would call and make a date, which I always entered into a casually friendly sort of way. Things drifted on like this for a couple of months, and then his calls were spaced sometimes as far apart as a week.

* * * *

Now for the last fortnight I haven't seen him. He has called me four times during that time, talked a while and offered some excuse as to why he couldn't see me. Over a week ago he called and tentatively made a date for the following Sunday. He said he might be out of town, but if not, he would call me. Naturally I waited for his call with my heart in my mouth, but he didn't call until late Monday afternoon. This time it was to explain he had been out of town over the week-end. He said if he could get tickets for a certain show here this week he would call me later. He hasn't called.

* * * *

What am I to think? Is he trying to break off with me gradually? Have I discouraged him by my apparent indifference? Do you suppose he thinks I am a confirmed man hater? Is he interested in someone else and afraid to come out frankly and say so lest I have another breakdown, such as I had when my engagement was broken? Please tell me what to believe and what to do.

URSULA.

Stop Leaning on Him.

DEAR URSULA: I can only suppose the man is not in love with you, does not wish to marry you and possibly, after a thoughtful session with himself, decided the only fair thing to do was to acquaint you with the platonic nature of his regard. This he may have proceeded to do in the most tactful way he knew, namely, in tapering off his erstwhile continuous attentions. Despite your great precaution, he may have realized you were fancying yourself in love with him, for you say "by the following autumn I was in love with him." And it was late in the autumn that his courtship began to dwindle perceptibly. Any person of average intelligence and average sensibilities, who has had average social experience with the opposite sex, knows instinctively when he or she has become the object of another's romantic regard. Love betrays itself through the expression of the eye, the inflection of the voice, through a thousand and one involuntary gestures which the one who loves is never conscious of.

* * * *

In the beginning he may have found your meek dependence upon him very touching, very appealing. It is a thorough-going masculine characteristic to enjoy being needed by a charming representative of the gentler sex. No doubt he got tremendous ego satisfaction in demonstrating his ability to erase another man's memory from your mind. But now your dependence may represent a greater responsibility than he wishes to assume. He may feel the time has come when you must learn to stand on your own feet, since he has no desire to play sturdy oak to your clinging vine for the remainder of life.

* * * *

His protracted absence, coupled with occasional telephone calls of inquiry about your welfare and explanations as to why he canont see you, suggests to me that he is dealing with you gently but firmly. He is making it necessary for you to learn to live without him, and at the same time giving continued assurance of his friendly interest. The knowledge that you were badly hurt before no doubt prompts him to go to exaggerated lengths to keep from being the person who hurts you again in a similar fashion.

* * * *

If you hope to keep his friendship, and with it the chance of transmuting it into love, I suggest you make him feel happier, less conscience-stricken, at his deliberate bout-face. When he calls you again, tell him in a light-hearted conversational flow all the diverting things you have been doing since last you talked with him. Let it be understood that you have been lunching, dining, dancing, riding, swimming, or what-have-you; in other words, having a grand time generally. Don't permit any pregnant pauses in conversation, in which you might seem to be listening for explanations as to why he hasn't come or called, or promises as to when he may be able to see you. Take charge of the conversation yourself and bring it to a close on a completely friendly and undemanding note.

* * * *

I believe if he could be thoroughly convinced that you are no longer looking to him as the sun in your social heaven, he might start seeking you again; and this time on a new and entirely different basis, namely, as an interesting woman whom he wishes to see simply because he wishes to see her, and not because he feels he is doing her a favor in taking her out. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

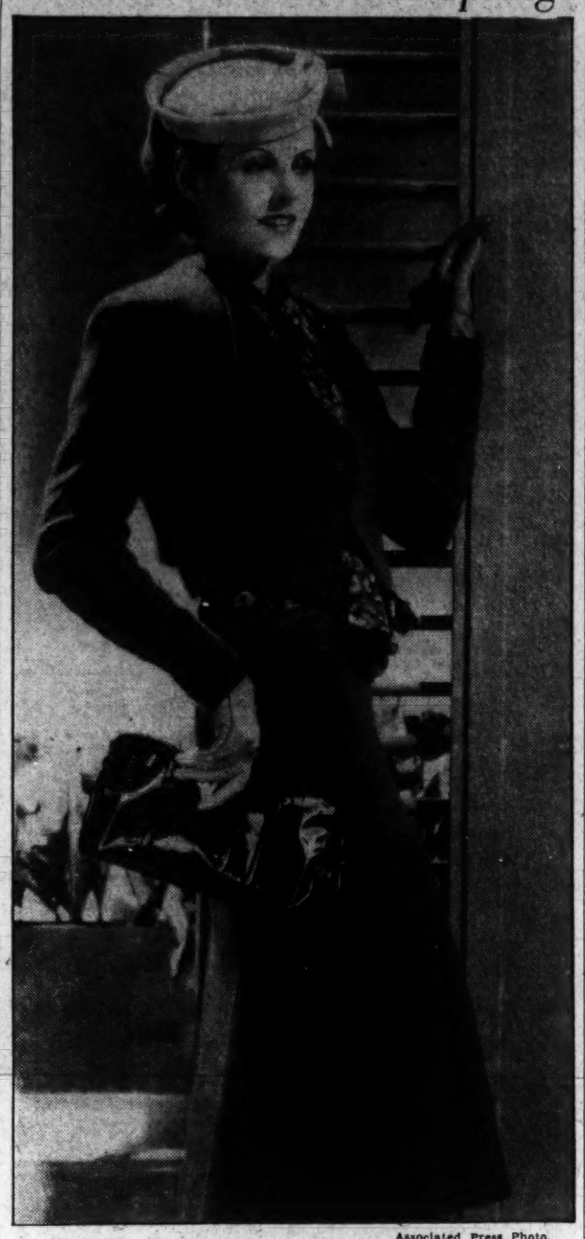
Violet Suit Personifies Spring



Associated Press Photo.

This suit in parma violet wool with printed blouse in brilliant hues of red, purple and yellow, is the personification of Easter. Besides its colorful theme, it has many unusual style details, such as the collarless and revered jacket with vest-like front, and the slit diagonal pockets. Stitched yellow felt fashions the "soup plate" hat—the gloves of doeskin match in color tone. It is a suit which adapts itself well to numerous changes of color scheme; white, pastel tints or a number of the current popular brilliant tones, would be equally smart with the parma violet background.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

A LETTER from a middle-aged woman says she lives in a country district and cannot obtain the best medical advice, and wants to know whether there is any hope for varicose veins, which she says are causing her agony.

It always is a pleasure to be able to answer people in distress with assurance of hope and relief. It certainly can be done in the present instance.

The modern treatment of varicose veins by injections has been very successful, and besides requires a minimum of confinement or time off from work. It is comparatively simple and easy for a trained physician to do it, and I doubt if there is any country district at the present time in America where there is not at least one physician who has had experience in this modern treatment.

Varicose veins may occur anywhere, but are most lively to occur in the legs. They are tortuous and enlarged veins, made this way because the valves on the inside of the veins which keep the column of blood moving upward to the heart have broken down. This allows a long stagnant column of blood to accumulate.

Besides being unsightly, the leg is heavy and feels stiff and congested, and indeed it is. The skin suffers from lack of proper circulation, and sometimes breaks down into ulcerations.

Caused by Prolonged Standing.

Varicose veins are liable to result from prolonged standing, in occupations in which it is necessary for the individuals to be on the feet a good deal of the time.

Prevention consists in removing any constriction of the leg, such as garters, which would tend to put a strain on the valves of the vein. They may be treated palliatively by the use of an elastic stocking, which supports this column of blood in the superficial veins and improves the circulation. Until recently the only radical treatment was surgical removal of the veins. This, however, was not always successful, and required a great deal of time and discomfort.

The modern injection treatment simply obliterates the veins without attempting to remove them. Its success depends upon the fact that only the superficial veins are usually affected, and the circulation in the limb will go on in the deeper veins successfully if the stagnation in the superficial veins is removed. The solution which is used obliterates the vein so that it no longer acts as a channel for blood. This solution is injected directly into the vein with a hypodermic needle. It can be done in the physician's office, and the patient can even go to work the same day of the injection if necessary. No anesthetic is required. A number of injections are done at intervals of a few days or a week.

It has been successful in about 90 per cent of the cases.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, March 25.

TODAY, being Good Friday, our Metropolitan Opera gives its only performance of the season of Wagner's "Parsifal." This is a traditional event at the Met, and today's performance will be memorable, with the incomparable Flagstad and Melchior heading the troupe. On Monday the op'ry begins its last week.

ALICE HUGHES.

The old aviary at Thirty-ninth and Broadway is winding up a glorious season, especially on the Wagner side. Verdi, Puccini and the rest of the Italians have been comparatively neglected. They were the glories of Caruso's day, but now the great Norsewoman and her gifted associates have taken the play away from French and Italian opera. Old Dick Wagner has had a great year.

The new impresario, Tenor Edward Johnson, has done a great job of resuscitation, and has been rewarded with a two-year contract. Next year the season will be longer and probably better. Many of the new girls have done well with their arias, and even Gladys Swarthout has fled Hollywood long enough to turn loose her mezzo on a few roles. Incidentally, the critics put Glad on the grid after her season's debut in "Mignon." Not so hot, they opined.

Pretty Anna Kaskas, the Hartford contralto, seems to be doing well in the big singing league, and other newcomers like Muriel Dickson, the English thrush, and Natalie Bodanya, the Philadelphia soprano, forge onward and upward in the birdhouse. I'm no opera-hound, except when Flagstad sings, but I must admit that a big night at the Met is ever one of the town's most thrilling sights and sounds. It's an institution and tradition worth preserving.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Good Friday this year brings heavy thoughts of the same day just 20 years ago. I had dropped into my town's Episcopal Church for part of the annual Three-Hour Service—and a few minutes later a man came in and left a newspaper in the last pew. I looked idly at the banner across page one, and my heart missed three beats. It read: "United States Declares War on Germany!" Strangest of all places to read the beginning of the Nation's travail! And little did any of us realize that sad day, that the old world of safety and confidence was dead and buried—and that we faced one, new, strange and perilous! . . .

* * * *

My St. Patrick's Day, this year, was made pretty jolly by the appearance of John Mnyahonesak in a local court of law for a change of name. After due thought, learned Judge Leyden granted Mr. this-and-that's plea that he be granted the use of the grand old name of Mahoney. No doubt he'll be marching with the men from County Cork next year! . . .

* * * *

On your spring visit to town you may be on the prowl for a good eating house which is different and off the beaten highway, and so I suggest a drop-in at Frankie and Johnny's, a simple second-floor spot at the corner of Forty-fifth street and Eighth avenue. It looks today just as it did when it was one of the town's most famous speakeasies in the Bad Old Days, and the grub is elegant. And you may see such noted troupers as Helen Hayes viciously attacking a thick steak . . .

* * * *

Onward and upward with the sex: For the first time in 43 years, Washington Square College of our New York University has picked a coed as chairman of the senior ball. She's a fetching 19-year-older named Rheta Benjamin, and is a shark at basketball and field hockey as well as hops. Ah, there, Rheta! . . . Well, our 1939 world's fair looks like a sure-shot success now. The Republic of Guatemala was the first nation to crash in with an acceptance of the bid to take part. Finland and France were hot on her heels!

Planning Your Garden

Small-Sized Plot Pool Will Beautify Back Yard.

YOU'VE LITTLE time for gardening? Then concentrate your energies on a pocket-handkerchief garden at kitchen or side door.

Here's a plan for a garden you can start now to give you outdoor beauty for the summer long and cut flowers for your house with little effort and expense.

Make a small concrete pool—or just sink a tub for a goldfish and lily pool and place a comfortable glider beside it.

Plant buddleia or butterfly bushes now at the corners of your outdoor living room. They'll reach full height by midsummer and give a wealth of graceful lilac-like spikes of bloom. Hardy white phlox will thrive nearby. Dahlias in purplish reds and tall-growing cosmos will insure privacy—and armfuls of cut flowers. Zinnias and the new odorless marigolds bloom profusely, whether the season is wet or dry, hot or cool. Tuck in a few tuberoses for their enchanting fragrance.

In the shelter of the house wall plant hardy chrysanthemums. So protected, they often supply Thanksgiving bouquets.

Our 40-page booklet, "Garden Flowers to Grow and Cut," tells how to get fullest value from a small space. All about water lilies, shrubs, vines, bulbs, perennials and annuals.

Ingenue in 'Jane Eyre' Hopes To Own About 1,000 Gowns

Patricia Peardon Would Change Clothes Dozen Times Daily.

By Ethel Ehlen.

"I WOULD LIKE to have about 1,000 dresses and change clothes a dozen times a day," said Patricia Peardon, who has been playing an ingenue role in "Jane Eyre." The old-fashioned costumes worn in the play, Patricia thinks, are very quaint and lovely, and she has been quite thrilled wearing them but, she stated emphatically, she would not like to have lived during that era—the houses were too much of a contrast to modern New York apartments. This young actress-student likes to plan her own wardrobes and select her clothes, and expects to design her own creations when she "grows up."

Getting an education, Patricia believes, is the most important thing in her life at present—a varied background of knowledge, to play important roles in the theater later, with better understanding. "Going to school by correspondence is rather difficult," she commented, "but it is interesting. I am particularly fond of literature, French and history (this is my favorite subject), but how I hate algebra." While studying and preparing to be the "greatest actress the world has ever known," Patricia dons slacks and sports jackets, and takes a seven-mile bicycle ride each morning.

Skates and Swims.

She augments this exercise with roller skating and swimming—claiming to be an expert swimmer and diver, but still is trying to gain proficiency in the jack knife dive. "How about winter sports?" she was asked. "I don't like them, because I dislike being cold," she answered with a shudder.

In line with this Patricia maintains that spring and summer clothes are more attractive for young girls than winter costumes. They are more ornate and interesting than the plain versions of winter, she avers. "Although I do love skirts and sweaters," she hastened to add, and mother is continually knitting me lovely sweaters for my navy, gray and brown skirts." Turquoise blue and peach are the favorite colors of this talented child. For dinner wear she displayed a charming model of navy blue sheer, whose neckline and short, puffed sleeves were edged with rows of white Val lace, with a quaint nosegay of wool flowers and lace perched jauntily on one shoulder.

While Patricia likes the movies, and hopes some day to be a star of the screen as well as the legitimate stage, she feels that the stage is the better of the two; although, she insists, one should have a number of years' experience on the stage before even attempting to act for the movies. In the interim she is getting valued speaking experience on the radio, having appeared in such programs as the "March of Time," the "Cavalcade of America" and a year on the Roxy program. Several summers of stock company experience are also part of her intensive training.

Harris & Ewing.

PATRICIA PEARDON, child actress of stage and radio, wearing a frock of her own selection, fashioned of pastel-green sheer wool, trimmed with dozens of shiny white buttons. Patricia expects to design her own clothes, as well as becoming a great star of the stage and screen.

Eyes Change Color.

With all this admonition from beauty experts about starting young to preserve your youth and beauty, we wondered what a member of the younger generation thought about the idea. "Whatever beauty a person has comes from within," Patricia advised with juvenile sincerity, 'if I grow up to be snooty and selfish and disagreeable, I am sure that I shall not be attractive to anybody." Commenting upon the unusual gray color of her eyes matching her blonde hair, she explained that her eyes changed color every day, and that she had a most interesting time of it, investigating the change in hue and tint each morning.

As a final word about clothes—a subject in which Patricia has great concern, she stated that she loved dresses with lots and lots of buttons, especially odd-looking and unusual-shaped buttons, unconsciously emulating a number of our greatest American and Parisian designers. For our delightful interview at the Raleigh Hotel, where she is stopping with her mother and father, Patricia was wearing a sheer wool of pastel green with gala parades of white buttons marching down the sleeves and front of her smart little frock. The daffodil pinned to her collar, she informed us, was a self-assigned souvenier from the breakfast table.

Nagging Makes Child's Stutter Become Worse

Neurologist Better Fitted Than Parents to Handle Vocal Affliction.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to cure a child of a stutter or of a nervous twitch by correction and nagging. All that such treatment does is to increase the trouble. The basis of the disease lies too deep for such superficial handling.

Stuttering may be caused by a number of things. Sometimes it is the result of changing a left-handed child to using his right hand, sometimes nervous shock may produce it, or a subconscious resistance to domination. It is far better dealt with by a neurologist or a psychiatrist than the parent.

In any case, to tell a child not to stutter is like telling the waves to stop rolling. He cannot help it.

The same is true of the child who twitches his face or his shoulder or any other part of his body in a spasmodic way. He may be the victim of chorea, in which case he should be taken to a doctor at once, or he too may be suffering from some obscure nerve tension.

The treatment which a neighbor has found effective with her youngster is not necessarily the treatment for other nervously affected children. Each case must be studied and diagnosed and given the special care which the particular circumstances call for.

There is no use waiting in the hope that the child will outgrow these idiosyncrasies. The chances are that he never will. They will become worse instead of better, and shortly it may be too late to do anything about them. A competent physician can either prescribe the treatment or advise what specialist to go to.

But with neglect these deformities of speech and manner may become serious handicaps to the child who has them, perhaps the means of spoiling his chances of happiness and success.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

NOT THAT we advocate taking a husband by the ear and dragging him in to exclaim over the curtains you've just finished, or the new chair covers you've broken all your finger nails over.

But, honestly, a lady does need some enthusiasm once in a while over her accomplishments in making new things out of old, or being really clever about putting a blue bowl here or a pewter pitcher there.

Susannah had to practically kidnap her husband, Ben, from his newspapers to get some appreciation for the way she's done over her dining room. And then he didn't really notice much difference—"Sure, honey, it's swell—it sure is pretty neat."

But even if Susannah's husband doesn't always catch the difference between fresh cretonne and faded velvet, he certanly knows that Susannah has what it takes. That's why he's so proud to bring his friends home to dinner. He has so much confidence in her as a matter of fact that he'd take the faded velvet on faith, just because she haded it there.

The room is a big improvement, though, even if Ben doesn't get the fine points. White painted walls, yellow ceilings, a peacock blue broadloom rug, then draperies of a thrilling cretonne with lots of yellow in the design and an incr fold of plain peacock blue for accent all around the draperies for finish. The chair seats have white washable leather seats. On the buffet, Susannah has some peacock blue porcelain bowls where she keeps yellow or white flowers. Or sometimes pink gladioli are nice here, too. The furniture is walnut—Queen Anne.

As a rule, she sets the able with white, yellow and maroon tones predominating, and highlighted by the silver, these colors are very successful in this room.

She is a member of the Civic Opera there and has sung in concert and opera both here and abroad.

Turner will go to her home in Waverly, Tenn., for ten days; Mrs. Biermann, Decorah, Iowa; Mrs. Dow Harter, Ohio for a few days, and, on April 1, Mrs. Paul Brown will return to Georgia to remain for the summer.

Mrs. Biermann has serving with her on the committee for the luncheon Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Martin F. Smith, Mrs. Moran, Mrs. John Martin, Mrs. Lawrence Imhoff, Mrs. J. Buell Snyder and Mrs. J. Hardin Peterson, of Florida.

The Congressional Club tea Tuesday will be from 3:30 to 5:30. Receiving with the guest of honor and Mrs. Reed will be members of the board of the club, Mrs. Otis Bland, Mrs. Harry Englebright, Mrs. John E. Rankin, Mrs. Joe L. Smith, Mrs. William H. Larrabee, Mrs. Duncan, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster and Mrs. Karl Stefan.

Mrs. William Bankhead, wife of the Speaker of the House; Mrs. James F. Byrnes, wife of Senator Byrnes, and Mrs. Lindley Hadley, a past president of the club, will pour.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the function includes Mrs. Duncan, Mrs. Bland and Mrs. Englebright, with the hospitality committee comprised of Mrs. Bertrand H. Snell, Mrs. John J. Cochran, Mrs. Frank L. Kloeb, Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Roy O. Woodruff.

Washington Girl Scouts Mark 25th Year Today

Nation-Wide Broadcast at 6 P. M. From the Little House to Celebrate Anniversary of Movement; Veteran Member to Speak.

Washington Girl Scouts, led by Mrs. Frederick Brooke, national board member, will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Girl Scouts of America with a Nation-wide radio broadcast from the National Girl Scouts Little House, 1750 New York avenue, at 6 p. m. today. Mrs. Carl I. Aslakon, one of the first members of the first Girl Scout troop organized in Savannah, Ga., will take part in the program.

The Girl Scout Little House has become a real factor in the civic and Girl Scout activities of the District since it was moved from its position near the United States Treasury after the close of the Better Homes Campaign in 1923. The Little House, which is a replica of the home of John Howard Paine, author of "Home Sweet Home," was erected in Washington by the General Federation of Women's Clubs as a part of the Better Homes movement. Mrs. Herbert Hoover was at the time president of the Girl Scouts and it was through her efforts that the house was moved to its present site as Girl Scout headquarters. Within this house President Coolidge and President Hoover dined on food prepared by the Girl Scouts. Every First Lady, including Mrs. Roosevelt, has been a frequent visitor to this house.

Mrs. Gertrude L. Bowman, hostess at the Girl Scout Little House, long has been a leader in Girl Scout work in the District and was closely associated in this work with Mrs. Hoover when Mrs. Hoover was the wife of the then Secretary of Commerce and later First Lady.

How to make a dress for 5 cents and how to make an unusual dish called "Angels on Horseback" will be demonstrated by Washington Girl Scouts. Girl Scouts taking part are Dorothy Davis, Betty Warner, Helen Vajda, Lenora Throckmorton.

Mrs. Marion A. Cheek, of Buffalo, N. Y., economic welfare chairman of the National League of Women Voters, has written to the State chairman to encourage the membership to give a special study to all aspects of collective bargaining.

"The fact that discussions of the present labor situation throughout the country are on everyone's lips makes our study immediately more and more difficult," Mrs Cheek said. "A 'hot' subject has this advantage—that none need be told its importance, but reasonable analysis and the use of reliable facts becomes doubly hard when our passions and pocketbooks are pre-engaged. I believe league groups are longing for more light on the subject of collective bargaining and are awaiting for more guidance."

Simulation of interest in the bargaining processes is being made through a study guide of five lessons drafted by Mrs. Cheek. League groups in 550 communities will encourage special meetings and classes at which the whole problem will be reviewed.

The league's study will embrace the comparison between individual and collective bargaining and an analysis of bargaining agencies, including various types of labor and company unions.

"Government's relationship to labor disputes" is the title of two final lessons, in which the use of police and court injunctions in dispute settlements, the activities of specified Government units engaged in arbitration, the works of the national labor relations act, and the question of compulsory arbitration, are to be examined thoroughly.

Officers, Midshipmen of French Training Ship Jeanne d'Arc Are Guests of Admiral, Mrs. William Leahy at Tea Dance

Party for French Visitors Held in Chinese Room of Mayflower; Mrs. Claude A. Swanson and Others Receive With Naval Hosts.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Informality marked the tea dance given yesterday afternoon by the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William D. Leahy for the officers and midshipmen of the French training ship Jeanne d'Arc. It was in the Chinese room of the Mayflower where a "Paul Jones" was the climax of party.

The French visitors, who were somewhat skeptical as to America and American girls when they first arrived in Washington, had decided by the time yesterday's affair was well under way that the Capital was a pretty nice place after all. They seemed to be getting on well with the young members of the Navy set who had been invited to meet them, and who were either dancing or sitting about on chairs and sofas and even on the steps, in animated conversation punctuated with gestures.

The Paul Jones, into which they entered with spirit, served to dissipate any lingering feeling of formality which might have made the party "stuffy." One of the young officers volunteered the information that in France only children played such games, but granted it was fun nevertheless.

Although there was a buffet table set with sandwiches, cakes and other refreshments, dancing rather than eating seemed to engage the interest of the midshipmen and their young partners, and during most of the time, it was the older guests who gathered around the table.

Receiving with Admiral and Mrs. Leahy were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Capt. Latham, commander of the Jeanne d'Arc; the Chief of Naval Intelligence and Mrs. William D. Puleston, and the Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable. Lieut. W. L. Freseman, aide to Admiral Leahy, made the introductions.

Among the guests were Rear Admiral and Mrs. W. S. Pye, Capt. and Mrs. Royal E. Ingersoll, Mrs. Ingersoll wearing a blue straw hat with roses tucked under the bit of a brim in back; Capt. and Mrs. Stephen C. Rowan and their two daughters, the Misses Betsy and Alex Rowan, who were among the girls enjoying the dance; Capt. and Mrs. John R. Beardall, with their daughter, Miss Edith Beardall, who wore green, with a small black straw hat; Commander and Mrs. Wallace Lind, Commander and Mrs. Roscoe E. Schuirmann, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas C. Hart and their daughters, the Misses Brownie and Harriet Hart, home from Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., for Easter vacation, and Miss Isabelle Hart.

Also among the guests were Miss Carolyn Chantry, Capt. and Mrs. F. W. Rockwell with their daughters, the Misses Betty and Kappy Rockwell; Commander and Mrs. Griffin with their daughter, Miss Patricia Griffin, and Miss Jane Edelen, who is here from Mexico City as Miss Griffin's guest. Their younger daughter, Mimi, also was present, but only as an onlooker. She had just come from Potomac School, where her parents had called for her, and sat in the lobby at the head of the steps to the Chinese room, a solitary but interested spectator commanding full view of the party.

Others present included Miss Maisie Howard, with her father, Capt. Herbert Howard; Miss Nancy Kittelle, Miss Anne Claude, Miss Christine Gawne, in a becoming frock of red; Miss Hope Blandy, Miss Lucie Hawley, Miss Georgia Toulon, Miss Jane Ducey, Miss Frances Crock; Commander and Mrs. Dallas Dupre—Mrs. Dupre, the daughter of Vice Admiral Grout, distinguished French naval officer who is now retired; Miss Ray Williams, and the Air Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Champsaur, who were entertaining at dinner later in the evening for some of the officers of the ship.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

Well, well, Washington certainly has a crop of budding young geniuses. Mercer Fadely, young son of the Fenton-Fadelys', instead of following in his father's footsteps (we should say stirrups), as a rider, has turned his spare time to writing—when his studies for the sixth grade out at the Landon School are not too demanding. A recent delightful little poem——

"On a small ship some sailors stand;
Some look sad and some look funny.
They make an awful moan for land,
For sight of land they'd give some money.
All at once land came into sight
Then they knew Columbus was right."

Even if Mercer does not find horses intriguing, at least he seems to have started out riding a good hobby horse, and we do not mean the kind that rocks.

Polly Wirgman seems to have found something very interesting abroad. After many months on the other side of the Atlantic, she was expecting to return here about the first of next month. Now, all is changed. She is going on to Paris for two more months and we bet shopping has something to do with the prolongation of the European visit.

• • • •

We may be a democratic country, but when royalty comes around we do give attention and why not? People of crowns and titles are usually very interesting and how they can wear clothes! Saw Prince and Princess Sapieha lunching in the Carlton. She had on a dark gray strictly tailored suit with which she wore a small black felt off-the-face hat. Her tall husband was immaculately turned out in tweeds.

• • • •

Among those having lunch at the Allies Inn the other day was Richard Southgate, who, at the moment we saw him, was ever so slowly making progress through the maze of tables, casting a wary eye now and then at his loaded tray.

You may take your choice of coffee, cocoa, milk, Tom Collins, Old Fashions, whiskey and sodas or what have you, but for Representative Edward O'Neill, make it an orangeade—nice, chilled and foaming with crystal bubbles, as he frequently orders them at the Wardman Park lounge. The young Congressman from New Jersey, who is red headed and regards the passing world with candid blue eyes, is an Irishman—if our memory serves us right. Erin's sons are sometimes referred to as Orangemen, if so, that would perhaps account for his preference in drinks.

So it would seem that exotic Frances Simpson Johnson has chosen June 10 as the date for her second trip up the aisle to the altar, there to exchange vows with Dr. Kirby Smith. May we take this time to wish them both much happiness.

Mme. Homero Viteri, wife of the chief of the Ecuadorean Boundry Delegation, her charming daughter, Rosita, her American-born son, Billy, were dressed so smartly as they strolled through the Shoreham lobby, it might easily have been an Easter parade. Without a doubt Mme. Viteri is one of the most beautiful women in Washington. Her costume was of gray woolen with a three-quarter length cape, and her hat was black, with chiffon streamers, and very, very chic.

Have you ever noticed how very good looking the young women executives and assistants in the National Broadcasting studios are? And the quite perfect way they speak? Two charming examples, easing "that 4:30 drag" at tea with their friends in the National Press clubrooms, were Phoebe Gale and Gladys Murphy.

Clyde Seavey, Wife Are Dinner Hosts

Drane, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Marion E. Caskie, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Benton, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Schneider, Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Bryant, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Heart Disease Causes Death Of Drinkwater

Noted British Playwright and Actor Well Known in United States.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 25.—John Drinkwater, 54, British actor, poet and author who won world fame for his dramatizations of great historical characters, died in his sleep today of a heart attack.

The death of one of the playwrights best known to the English-speaking world, silencing a voice that still was at the peak of its poetic power and fertility, was widely mourned.

"He died too soon," said George Bernard Shaw, Drinkwater's friend and colleague. "He seemed to have 20 or 30 more years of art in him. He might have been poet laureate some day—he was a very distinguished figure in literature."

United States Ambassador Robert W. Bingham said Drinkwater's loss "will be shared by the whole English-speaking world."

Drinkwater, a tall, robust figure, apparently was in good health yesterday when he attended the Oxford-Cambridge crew race and later spent the evening with friends at the University Club.

He died at his home—once the residence of the diarist, Samuel Pepys—where he lived with his wife, the former Daisy Kennedy, the Australian violinist, and their daughter, Penelope Ann, who was born in 1930.

Acclaimed in U. S.

Drinkwater's historical plays won wide acclaim in the United States, particularly his "Abraham Lincoln," which was produced in 1918 and introduced him to large American audiences, and his "Robert E Lee."

The playwright, following in the footsteps of a father who quit school teaching to become an actor, abandoned a lucrative insurance business for the theater.

He had just completed a motion picture, "The King and His People," of which he was author and producer. Especially planned for England's coronation year, the film dealt in typical Drinkwater style with the throne from the reign of Queen Victoria to the present.

Drinkwater was versatile and indefatigable. Besides his plays, some of them, like "Abraham Lincoln," written in prose that was almost blank verse, he wrote frequently for newspapers on literary and political subjects and was particularly interested in the lecture platform.

Classmate of Lawrence.

He was educated at Oxford High School, where he was a classmate of the youth who later became the famous Lawrence of Arabia, and then toured the provinces in his father's company.

For a while he was a moderately successful insurance salesman and then, tall and handsome, he turned back to the stage. He participated in the founding of the Pilgrim Players, which later developed into the internationally famous Birmingham Repertory Theater.

Drinkwater toured the United States as a lecturer in 1925 and was impressed by American life which he described as "vivid, immensely varied, full of achieving energy and sparkling with a natural wit that can hardly be found among any of the older and perhaps more tired peoples."

Some of his critics regarded his work as "middle class," but receptive English audiences admired its idealism and considered him typical of "the empire's finest."

Man Dives 3 Floors From Union Station

A dive through a third-floor window of Union Station and a 30-foot plunge down an air shaft sent William Drewery, jr., 28, 300 block of D street northwest, to Emergency Hospital with internal injuries and cuts.

Attendants at the station said Drewery, a curb service man at a Connecticut avenue barbecue, entered the railroad Y. M. C. A., ran to a window and leaped out. A slanting skylight just below the window broke his fall, but he slid off and fell to the bottom of the shaft.

Drewery was pulled out by the fire rescue squad and taken to the hospital. Police learned he formerly lived in Clifton Forge, Va.

Huge Seadrome Urged For Planes in Pacific

Los Angeles, March 25 (AP).—A $30,000,000 floating seadrome—rising 117 feet above water level—was discussed today by financial and civic leaders as an aid to air travel between the United States and the Hawaiian Islands.

Plans for the structure were brought here yesterday by M. E. Heiser, Australian engineer. He proposed a "U" shaped raft with arms 2,000 feet long and 400 wide. Planes would land within the "U." Construction would require 10,000 men working two years. It would be towed to its mooring after completion.

Actress Divorces Author.

Reno, March 25 (AP).—The three-month marriage of Julia Laird, brunette stage actress, and John M. (Jack) Kirkland, author of "Tobacco Road," ended today when the actress won an uncontested divorce. The charge was mental cruelty.

4 Enraged Lions Slain.

Nimes, France, March 25 (AP).—Four lions got loose from a menagerie today and most of the townsfolk retreated into their houses and bolted the doors. However, a few hardy souls ventured out with rifles and shot the beasts as they were sunning themselves on the steps of a church.

"The Good Earth," in Picturized Form, Is a Work Of Majestic Dimensions, Ace Acting and Direction

The Spirit and Movement of the Pearl Buck Novel Have Been Retained With Remarkable Fidelity; Some of the Photographic Effects Are Amazing; Hii, the Chinese Water Buffalo, Attends Private Preview, Following Banquet at Willard, Which He Missed; And What About Marlene Dietrich?

ANOTHER of those perfectly appointed repasts was spread before the famished drama desks and some 19 other guests—drawn for the greater part from the Fourth Estate and the theater—in the Presidential Suite of the Willard Hotel on Wednesday evening, with Norman Pyle, itinerant publicist de luxe, and the svelte Mrs. Kay Ford as hosts, representing our old friend, "Bill" Ferguson and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

BELL.

The banquet of boneless squab, champagne and other delicacies was served at a huge and beautifully decorated oval table at which, as so rarely happens on these sumptuous occasions, every place was occupied. The dinner had been preceded by cocktails in the adjoining rooms of the Variety Club of Washington and was preliminary to the private preview screening of M-G-M's picturization of Pearl Buck's comprehensive novel of "The Good Earth" in the projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange, on New Jersey avenue at K street.

"The Good Earth," which comes into the National Theater following "The Great Waltz" on Sunday, April 4, for an extended, reserved-seat engagement, consumed 2 hours and 20 minutes of running time at the preview. It is a picture executed on a scale of imposing magnitude, with Paul Muni and Luise Rainer, winners of the Academy awards for the best acting of 1936, in the costellar roles of Wang Lung and Olan and supporting roles of exceptional worth splendidly enacted by those two stalwart character actors, Walter Connolly and Charles Grapewin, the old vaudeville actor who has developed into one of the cinema's mainstays in diversified portrayals. Back in the old Kohl and Castle days in Chicago one hardly suspected that half of the popular team of Charles Grapewin and Anna Chance would develop into so fine a legitimate actor.

With certain inevitable abridgements and necessary condensations, the film version of "The Good Earth" adheres with remarkable fidelity to the mood and movement of the Pearl Buck story. Between book covers, "The Good Earth" encompassed virtually the whole story of human existence. It depicted the rise of a poor farmer to wealth and lordly influence over the seemingly insuperable obstacles of famine, drought, fire, pestilence, armed attack and all of the other trials and tribulations that can harass the human race.

The picture stresses the main theme of the story, omitting only those embellishing details that many printed pages were able to accommodate where the screen, for once, finds itself slightly handicapped by the limitations of acceptable running time for practical theatrical purposes.

It seemed to me that the most effective scenes in a drama, which, perforce, is more lugubrious than gay were those in which Wang Lung and his sons and field hands saved their land from the ravages of a plague of locusts. That the locusts turned out to be grasshoppers in no way lessened the tremendous sweep of an incident in the picture that is a masterpiece of montage. How the thing ever was managed by the cameras is one of the mysteries of film-making. It is a memorable episode that conveys an immediate and overwhelming sense of the immensity of the threat in which Wang foresaw the probable collapse of his fortune.

One of the surprises of the production is the paucity of lines given Luise Rainer to speak in the role of Olan, faithful wife of the farmer who permitted his interests to ramble after the acquisition of great wealth. I am told that in the entire picture Miss Rainer has but 73 lines. Paul Muni's part is much more expansive than this and gives him virtual dominance of the play's development, except in the sheer pathos of Olan's isolated devotion.

"The Good Earth," of course, will be reviewed in detail upon the occasion of its Washington premiere at the National, but, in the meantime, it may be set down as a production of true road-show caliber, acted, directed and photographed in the highest traditions of the cinema.

One of the interesting attendants at the preview—in his ultra-modern traveling coache, parked out in front of the Fox Exchange—was Hii, the Chinese water buffalo, brought to this country by the M-G-M unit that journeyed to the Orient to make scenes for the picture. Hii is a docile and well-behaved beast, as gentle as a cow and as patient as Job. Hii is in the personal charge of Capt. Volney Phifer, an "animal man" who has toured with practically all of the caged exhibits M-G-M has sent around the country, including Leo, the lion; Mary, the rhinoceros; Johnny Weismuller's pet boa constrictor, and last, but not least, that charming young lady, Tarzana, the chimpanzee who completely captivated this desk upon her unexpected visit to the drama department a few months ago, when "Tarzan Escapes" was playing locally. Tarzana hasn't written us in a long time now and we are crushed!

It may be permissible, even in the light of yesterday's brief midweek notices of coming attractions, to emphasize that Easter week will be notable in Washington's downtown theaters. Three such pictures as "Maytime," with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy costarred, and Sigmund Romberg's enduring melodies for them to sing; "The King and the Chorus Girl," introducing an engaging new personality in Fernand Gravet and featuring Joan Blondell, Edward Everett Horton and Mary Nash, and "Sir James Matthew Barrie's "Quality Street," with Katharine Hepburn and Franchot Tone in the leading roles, are in themselves enough to guarantee a week of superlative entertainment.

* * * *

In this connection it may be said that according to a bulletin from Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers interests in the Washington territory, released yesterday, Easter week matinees will be presented daily in all of the Warner houses in the Capital. Special attractions have been booked into all houses with a view to affording first-grade diversion during the period of the spring school holidays.

The guess hazarded here a day or two ago that Marlene Dietrich was at the Carlton was inspired by telephoned reports of friends who had seen and spoken with her there. It is possible—if she actually was there—that an effective incognito was maintained by registering under her husband's name of Sieber, or perhaps her own maiden name of Mary Magdalene Von Losch.

Afterthought.

Or maybe she wasn't really there at all.

Will Amuse Kiddies at Capitol

These happy funsters in motley are members of the Lillian St. Leon Company presenting an act called "How Circus Riders Are Made" as part of the indoor circus being offered this week as an Easter novelty at Loew's Capitol Theater. All of the usual trimmings of the "big top" shows are included in this elaborate bill.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, March 26.

I am an inquisitive cuss. On a day like today, when I feel in the sort of mood grandma used to call her "attic-rummaging fever," I like to find out why things are as they are. You can imagine what that makes of me in Hollywood, where half of everything is without reason.

GROUCHO MARX.

Today I became interested in screen names, and where they came from. Some of their derivations interested me; let us see if they affect you similarly. It is easy to guess where harp-playing Harpo Marx got his name.

But did you know Groucho was so 'dubbed because off-screen he is—well, grouchy? And that Chico's fondness for chicken won him his title? Zeppo was so named because he used to do a balloon dance (the balloons looked like Zeppelins) on the stage.

Carole Lombard endowed Preston Foster with "Skippy," due to his boyish habit of protruding his lower lip in peeve. William Powell has been "Philo Vance" ever since he created the character on the screen. Janet Gaynor created her own nickname. Her real name is Laura, but as a child the nearest she could come to that was "Lolly," and Lolly it still is. Bette Davis' odd spelling of her first name also reverts to childhood. Once it was Betty, but she wrote it with an "e" before she learned to spell.

Lily Damita's nom-de-theater was bestowed on her by ex-King Alfonso of Spain. It means "little lady," and the sovereign said she was all of that. Lewis Oldfield went to Broadway from Oklahoma, and because of his drawl people called him "Oklahoma," which soon shortened itself to Oakie." He added "Jack" because it fitted. Ruth Chatterton is "Mike" to her intimates, a title her tomboyishness earned for her in girlhood. And Marion Davies is called "Doc." Her initials, M. D., led to that.

Some real chuckles are found in studio publicity items. Today came a blurb from Technicolor, proudly announcing an improvement in color film. Photographing hair in color has long resulted in a reflection of green or red upon the hair. "But our new film," the item states, "reveals the players' hair as natural as it is in real life." I am merely wondering if that "as natural" crack is intentional.

Civic Theater Heads to Open Summer Plays

Messrs. Tuttle and Skinner to Operate at Mt. Kisco and Westport.

While Lawrence Langner was in Washington for the opening of the Theater Guild production of "Jane Eyre," starring Katharine Hepburn at the National, plans were completed for the operation of his Country Playhouse, at Westport, Conn., for the forthcoming season by Day Tuttle and Richard Skinner of the Washington Civic Theater staff.

The Messrs. Tuttle and Skinner will open their ten-week season at Westport on Monday, June 28, just one week after they start their eighth season at the Westchester Playhouse, at Mount Kisco, N. Y.

All their productions will play both theaters, with each production opening at Mount Kisco and playing the following week at Westport.

Mr. Tuttle has just returned from California, where he has been lining up stars and plays for the coming summer season.

He will start immediately here in Washington assisting Constance Connor Brown with the rehearsals of "Girls In Uniform," the sixth production of the Civic Theater, which will open at Wardman Park Teater nex week.

Puppets Form Part of Cast Of Kid's Bill

"I Am Suzanna," the gay musical romance in which the famous Pedrecco's Piccoli marionette stole the picture from such seasoned players as Lillian Harvey and Gene Raymond, is the feature of the Junior Cinema Guild's morning matinee at the Rialto Theater tomorrow.

This show is the second in a series of four special children's programs presented by the newly formed Junior Cinema Guild, headed by Washington's three feminine theatre managers, Louise Noonan Miller, co-manager of the Rialto; Matilda Young, Washington representative of the Children's Theater of New York, and Bess Davis Schreiner, managing director of the American Theater Society.

"I Am Suzanne" is a unique blend of fantasy and romance, with the marionettes accounting for a large portion of the former. "The Hare and the Tortoise," a Walt Disney cartoon, will head the short subjects.

Two more Saturday morning programs, on April 3 and April 17 will be given.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, March 25.

CASTE: Mike Romanoff, suddenly possessed of $5, went to the Clover Club in Hollywood and took a fling at the dice tables there. He won $40 and quit . . . A young lady then approached him and asked Mike if he'd cash her $45 check. Romanoff agreed, presented the money and pocketed her check . . . She proceeded immediately to the dice table, lost the $45 and then returned to Mike. "May I see that check I gave you?" she asked him. Romanoff delivered the check to the young lady, who then tore it into small pieces . . . "I beg your pardon," Mike asked, "but may I ask—what's the idea?" . . . "I always heard," she explained, "that you are a gentleman!"

* * * *

SWANK: A group of bored socialites decided upon a new idea with which to amuse themselves—a rags-to-riches-party. Tyle Stevens and his sister, Mary Elizabeth, invited their friends to the Club Bali, all attired in beggar's rags . . . They then took the subway to South Ferry—but not before Fletcher Godfrey had phoned the I. R. T. first, asking to reserve a special private car . . . During that subway ride the ragged bluebloods pleaded for lams from the other subway passengers. They then ferried to Staten Island, begging nickels and dimes en route . . . At 2 a. m. they went to their homes, donned formal evening attire and returned to the Club Bali. The alms collected were sent to the milk fund.

CHANGE: Norman Light, the stage manager of "Frederika," sailed to British Guiana two weeks ago, for a vacation. Before he left, Light assured his Miami-bound friends that he'd get a much darker sun tan than they would . . . Mr. Light made good that promise. And to make that sun-tan record official, he walked unrecognized into the election booth in Georgetown, British Guiana—and cast a vote!

TRIUMPH: Grover Jones, the Hollywood scenarist, has but one hobby—printing. His boyhood dream was to own a printing press, and that dream now is realized . . . But Jones has gone beyond that. In his Hollywood home he now has placed a complete printing unit. He is publishing a quasi-surrealist book, printing only 50 copies. The book will express Grover Jones' thoughts, as quickly and exactly as they come to mind . . . And his manner of printing the copy is most unique. He doesn't write on paper, nor even on a typewriter. He translates his thoughts—directly onto his linotype machine!

AMBITION: Elizabeth Cooke, who now is employed by Fox-Twentieth Century, wrote a letter to Nicky Blair at the Paradise, asking for a job as a showgirl . . . Blair hired the movie starling. She'll replace Irma Wilson, who is leaving the Paradise show to go to Hollywood—and work for Fox-Twentieth Century.

* * * *

DEFEAT: Russell Patterson just was given a new office at the Paramount Studios. The artist was ushered into his resplendent room, and discovered that it was complete with desk, pencils and pens . . . "This is all very nice," he told the officials, "but I never use any of these things in my work. I'm a painter." The next morning a change was made—a larger desk was placed in the office. "No, no," Patterson explained, "I'm a painter. I want a painting board, that's all" . . . The following day the artist went to his office again. His desk had been replaced—by a huge painter's scaffold!

SUCCESS: Monday's newspapers announced the arrival here of a "lost" Rembrandt—the Juno portrait, which allegedly was stored in the German museum at Bonn for 30 years, and sold to two Dutch dealers last year at the Cologne auction. This is the real story of the discovery: When Propaganda Minister Goebbels became Germany's art boss, he fired the non-Aryan Max Friedlander, art expert at the Bonn Museum, and replaced him with Nazi Adolf Kottschau. Kottschau decided to clean out the "rubbish," and sold the Rembrandt for $300 . . . Another piece of that "rubbish" sold for $1,000 was a Bellini copy, now owned by Lord Duveen . . . who is asking $500,000 for it.

Amelia Will Try Again Next Month

San Pedro, Calif., March 25 (AP).—Amelia Earhart plans to resume her around-the-world flight late next month.

America's first lady of the skyways, who crashed last Friday in taking off from Honolulu to Howland Island on the second leg of the flight, returned home today on the liner Malolo to be greeted by her husband, George Palmer Putnam, New York publisher.

Her giant plane will be returned by ship April 3 for repairs.

Returning with the blonde flier were Capts. Harry Manning and Fred Noonan, navigators, and Paul Mantz, her technical adviser.

32 Hurt in Home Collapse.

Santiago, Cuba, March 25 (AP).—Thirty-two persons were injured here today, a number of them gravely, as the house in which they were attending a funeral collapsed.

Roosevelt Signs Bill Ending 'Blacklist' Fight

President Roosevelt wrote finis to a maritime controversy yesterday by signing a bill making it merely optional for seamen to carry so-called "continuous discharge books."

Under the original Copeland safety-at-sea act, all seamen were required to carry the books containing a continuous chronology of their service. Sailors on both Atlantic and Pacific Coasts objected to the law on the ground the books were potential blacklisting weapons in the hands of the shipowners.

Miriam Hopkins, in Hollywood From London, Plans to Go Back

Fascinated by British Methods of Production, Film Star Hopes Hereafter to Divide Her Time Between America and Europe.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Miriam Hopkins, back in Hollywood after six months in England, which she spent making "Men Are Not Gods," and having a good time, is so pleased with her experience there that she is planning to make at least one picture there each year from now on.

"I adored making a picture in London," said Miss Hopkins, on the set of "Woman Chases Man," which she is making for Samuel Goldwyn.

"When I left Hollywood last spring I was fully determined that picture making should have no part of my long awaited vacation from the lots of Hollywood.

"But, after the trip across the ocean and my grand tour of the Continent, I was so invigorated and alive that it took small persuasion on the part of Alexander Korda for me to consent to do a picture."

In preparation for her work, Miriam took a rose-covered cottage in the country, brought over her small adopted son, Michael, from America, and settled down to really enjoy the life of the British countryside.

About the house she rhadsodizes constantly. Michael became so much a part of the landscape that he returned home with a British accent so thick that he was for weeks the sensation of the neighborhood.

"I intend to take Michael with me to England each time that I go. I want him to become thoroughly familiar with all the historic spots of Europe, to familiarize himself with the history of each country and to understand thoroughly the problems thereof. I may put him in school in England, although that is too far in the offing to plan."

Miss Hopkins enjoyed the calm tempo of picture-making in the London studio in contrast to the hectic pace of those in Hollywood. The kindness and consideration with which she was treated everywhere was most gracious.

"My absence from Hollywood for so long a time, visiting so many places and meeting so many people, made me realize for the first time the truly marvelous influence of motion pictures as a great art of today.

"Always before I had taken motion pictures more or less as a matter of course, but traveling all over Europe, seeing the people of the various nations, watching them rapturously and, in many cases, learning valuable lessons from them, made me feel what a truly marvelous age we are living in.

"I feel sure that the peoples of coming generations will look back on our present age not in terms of art, of painting, sculpture, music or the kindred arts, but in terms of the motion picture."

Supplement Film Booked at Rialto

"Stand Up and Cheer," the musical revue of 1934, which was based on an idea of Will Rogers, will supplement the revival showing of "Ambassador Bill," starring the inimitable humorist, at the Rialto Theater next week.

During depression days, Rogers suggested creation of a Cabinet member—Secretary of Amusement—whose duty would be to aid in restoring prosperity by making people happy. That is the "plot" of "Stand Up and Cheer," and a gay and tuneful revue was built around that idea. Shirley Temple, Warner Baxter, Stepin Fetchit and Madge Evans head the cast.

Star Gives Watches To Friends on Job

Everyone was on time on the "Internes Can't Take Money" set at Paramount studio.

The reason was that Barbara Stanwyck, starred with Joel McCrea in the production, had presented each of 50 technicians employed on the production with a lapel watch.

To the director, Alfred Santell, she gave a gold key chain with a medallion and a key to his home fashioned of the same metal.

Diary Tells Way Brothers Met Death in Snow

Appeals to Virgin Fails as Cold, Hunger Grip Pair in Canadian Wilds.

Havre St. Pierre, Quebec, March 25 (Canadian Press).—Scrawled pages in a soggy diary found beside the frozen bodies of two youthful hunters in the snow-choked wilderness of northern Quebec revealed today a story of agonizing death from cold and starvation.

Death, encroaching slowly for days, wrote "finis" to the graphic record of the last days of Willie Collin, 23, and his brother Edgar, 20, who were prevented by hunger and storms from returning to their home at Longue Point de Mingnan. They left home last August.

The bodies, one in an old bunk, the other on the floor, were found by trappers in an abandoned cabin about three weeks ago.

Wounded With Ax.

An official of the attorney general's department, sent to investigate the deaths, found the diary, which disclosed the brothers had made the old shack into a camp to wait for a raging storm to abate. Then Willie Collin cut his leg while chopping wood and was unable to walk.

New storms buried the bush lands and they could not make their way through heavy snow. Supplies were meager.

The diary did not disclose how the youths spent their time in the woods from the middle of summer until Christmas, but they wrote constantly of illness, cold, hunger and thirst.

On January 26, Edgar wrote:

"My very dear parents and friends, it is Edgar whose sad duty it is to tell you that the good blessed Virgin came from Heaven last night to take away my dear brother Willie about 11 o'clock."

Food Runs Short.

"Dear God, I don't know what to do with myself. I can't sleep now. I have eaten only once in three days. I can hardly cut wood because I'm just able to lift the ax. Oh, God, maybe in a few days the blessed Virgin will come for me, too. Do not fear for us, dear parents, we have gone through too much not to be saved.

"I wish you good night now. I no longer can see the date on the page. Whatever date is missing from this notebook will be the day good Saint Anne came for me. I am saying my rosary. I cry and sigh, and am trembling with cold. Edgar."

That was the last entry in the diary.

The first was December 24. The next day, Christmas, told of "heavy snowstorm, very cold."

Weaker Each Day.

A week later Willie wrote he "ended this unlucky year by cutting my foot."

Extracts from entries in succeeding weeks in January said . . . "still snowing . . .we are getting weaker every day . . . oh, God, how miserable life is to us . . . for two days now we have eaten only (flour and water) cakes . . . we are very weak."

The entry of January 18 said: "What a sad sight we are. Willie especially. He is almost dead . . . haven't eaten for two days . . . another day and no one came to our rescue . . . we grow weaker every day and have hardly any flesh on our bodies . . . we think only of death . . ."

Lipstick Sales Mount As Albania Bans Veils

Tirana, Albania, March 25 (AP) Shopkeepers looked for sales of lipstick and rouge to triple today when the law prohibiting Mohammedan veils becomes effective.

Here and there was a timid blush as the Albanian women first showed their faces in public; others joined in jubilant burning of the veils as a symbol of their new freedom.

King Zog sponsored the law as part of a social reform program for his tiny nation.

U. S. Sentences 12 In Stock Swindle

New York, March 25 (AP).—Twelve men described by assistant U. S. Attorney William Power Maloney as "vultures of Wall Street" were sentenced to the Federal penitentiary today after their conviction last week on mail fraud and conspiracy charges.

The defendants were accused of swindling between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000 from investors who bought stock in the Public Service Holding Corporation, top company of a chain of some 20 corporations organized by Wallace C. Garland.

Garland, described by Maloney as "a calloused egotist who played ducks and drakes with other people's property," received a flat sentence of two years. Other defendants were sentenced to terms ranging from a year and a day to three and a half years each.

Pity the Detroit Tigers' rookie named Frank Croucher . . . his is the most hopeless task in the Southland . . . all he has to do to make good is beat our Charley Gehringer for the second-base job with the Tigers . . . Nap Lajoie might have failed at that for all his near-legendary greatness . . . the Tigers are panicky over their pitching prospects, with only Rowe and Bridges regarded as dependables . . . and Bridges has come down with a sore arm . . . and if you believe the correspondents with the Detroit club, Manager Mickey Cochrane is keeping the slowing Al Simmons in the line-up only in an attempt to justify, somehow, the $75,000 the Tigers paid the White Sox for Simmons' contract last winter.

Smith Fires 69, Wins North-South Open

Chicago Pro Has 286; Runyan, 2d; Nelson, 3d; D. C. Pair Out.

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 25.—Back on the scene of his major victory in his spectacular rookie season eight years ago, willowy Horton Smith, Chicago professional, fired a smart subpar 69 through whirling winds on the home stretch today to win again the North and South Open golf tournament with a 286 total.

As a "freshman," Smith, who authored the greatest record ever written by a first-year peformer, won his chief triumph here. Every year since has found the former Joplin ghost seeking the crown, but until today it always had escaped him.

The outlook wasn't any too promising after the third round this morning, for the blond bachelor trailed Paul (Little Person) Runyan, White Plains (N. Y.) pro, by three shots. However, in the stretch round, Smith bored his shots through winds that whipped heller-skelter over the course for the only better-than-par round of the afternoon, while Runyan stumped to 76 and a 289 tally that brought him second place.

Runyan Shoots 36.

Runyan kept step with par 36 through the first nine but Horton picked up a stroke with 35. It was on the way home that Smith really put on the pressure. He shot the last nine in 34, two under par, while Runyan required a three-blow margin.

Smith opened his quest for the championship with a record-breaking 67 Tuesday, which Denny Shute, West Newton, Mass., equaleld the same day and Ed Dudley, Augusta, Ga., tied Wednesday. His four round scores were 67-73-77-69 and they brought him the $1,000 first prize. Runyan's 69-73-71—289 was worth $600 second place cash.

Nelson in Third Place.

Third place went to Byron Nelson, Reading, Pa., pro, with 292. He set the pace for the first two rounds with 139, but faltered today with 78-75 in the final 36 holes.

Harry Cooper, Chicago pro, and Ed Dudley, Augusta money shooter, wound up in a tie for fourth place with 294, while four professionals—Jimmie Hines, Garden City, N. Y.; Bill Mehlhorn, Louisville; Ralph Guldahl, Chicago, and Henry Picard, last year's champion from

District Handball Title to Schwartz; Plays at Chicago

Jack Schwartz, defending champion from the Jewish Community Center, again won the District four-wall handball title, defeating Sam Shmukler, his doubles partner, in straight sets, 21—10, 21—17. The J. C. C. pair lost to the Y. M. C. A. champs, Joe Cowley and Channing Walker, in the doubles final, 21—14, 11—21 and 21—12.

All participants will leave today for the National championships, starting Sunday in Chicago. The doubles victory for the "Y" representatives was an upset, the J. C. C. pair being pretourney favorites.

Schwartz was not extended in winning over Shmukler and won the title without losing a set in any match. Woodward and Vineberg won a third place play-off from Myers and Pearlman, 21—19, 7—21, 21—17.

Miss Miley In Augusta Golf Finals

She, Babe Didrikson to Fight It Out for the Title Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Ga., March 25.—Mildred Babe Didrikson, long-driving professional from Texas, and Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., will fight it out Saturday for the Augusta Woman's Invitational Golf Title in a pro-amateur final.

Miss Didrikson moved into the finals by defeating Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., 2 and 1. Miss Miley, pretty amateur campaigner, upset Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta's school girl State champion, 3 and 2.

Miss Kirby One Down.

Although she started 6—6—6, Miss Kirby was only one down going to the fourth as Miss Miley also had trouble with her woods. Miss Miley's margin soon was increased to three but Dorothy won the sixth and seventh and halved the ninth to make the turn one down.

After halving the tenth with fives, Miss Miley went two up by winning the eleventh as Miss Kirby needed a five to hole out.

They halved the twelfth with sixes, but Miss Kirby got down in three to win the thirteenth. Miss Miley again went two up as she holed out in four on the fourteenth. She won the fifteenth with a par 3 and the match ended on the sixteenth as they holed out in fives.

Los Angeles Promoter Bids for Braddock Bout

New York, March 25 (AP).—Joe Levy, veteran Los Angeles promoter, announced tonight that he would try to shift the proposed Braddock-Louis title fight from Chicago to the Los Angeles Coliseum in June.

Levy said, "The organization which I represent is prepared to make Braddock and Louis just as good a proposition as the one they have in Chicago."

Returns to Form

ED LINKE.

The Nats' pitcher whose job has been teetering came through yesterday with six innings of hitless pitching performance, allowing but one man to reach base.

Tilden Defeats Richards.

Ithaca, N. Y., March 25 (AP).—Big Bill Tilden, a bit leg weary after last night's match in New York with Fred Perry, defeated Vincent Richards in straight sets, 8—6, 6—3, tonight.

Linke Holds Orioles Hitless For 6 Innings as Nats' Rally Wins, 6-4, for Sixth Straight

Chubby Hurler Allows One Man to Reach First Base.

By Shirley Povich.

Winter Garden, Fla., March 25.—Big, red-faced Ed Linke, desperately attempting to stay in the big leagues in his third trial, guided the Nats to their sixth consecutive Grapefruit League victory today, 6 to 4, with a six-inning pitching performance that was flawless.

The Baltimore Orioles were entertaining well-defined notions of a victory over the Nats, after wresting a 4-0 lead from young Kendall Chase in the first three innings, and then they met up with Linke.

Linke Sensational.

Pitching those last six innings, the fat boy who had been haunted by the fear of release to the minors again was positively sensational. Not a hit did he allow; in only one inning was he asked to face more than three batters. The only Oriole who reached base against him was waved there by Umpire Kolls, who detected Herbert Crompton, the Nats' young catcher, interfering with the hitter's swing.

And, what is more, none of the 19 Orioles who faced Linke was able to get the ball out of the infield. He struck out five.

Victory came when the Orioles' defense came apart in the eighth inning. Trailing, 4-3, at that point, the Nats scored three runs on two hits and a series of Baltimore muffs, four in number.

But the Nats tonight were pondering the cost of their victory. First Baseman Joe Kuhel bore an egg-sized lump behind his right ear, where a ball pitched by grizzled Leon Pettit struck him in the seventh inning.

Hit by Slow Curve.

The ball that hit Kuhel was a slow curve, but the Nats' star was struck solidly. He turned pale, started to slump to his knees, when Umpire Kolls caught him. Mrs. Kuhel, sitting in the stands, 50 feet away, shrank back in horror and alarm. Kuhel was rushed back to the Nats' headquarters at Orlando despite an early diagnosis of no serious injury.

The Nats were hitting with great regularity all afternoon and compiled 11 safeties to 3 for the Orioles, but with men in scoring position the hits were not forthcoming.

Young Chase presented the Orioles with a 1-run lead at the start when he walked the first two hitters to face him. An infield single by Puccinelli, formerly with the A's, drove in the run.

Chase's wildness put him in trouble again in the third and the Orioles came up with three more runs after the young left-hander passed out two more walks and pitched a single to Abernathy. Ab Wright, turned back to the minors by Cleveland, scored two runners with a long double to right.

Dusty Rhodes Touched.

Harry Matuzak, who failed in a tryout with the Athletics last year, pitched the Orioles through three scoreless innings, but the Nats collected a pair of runs off the veteran Dusty Rhodes in the fourth to cut the Orioles' lead to 4 to 2. Buddy Myer and Shanty Hogan delivered singles and then Taft Wright, appearing as a pinch hitter, singled briskly to left.

They slashed the Orioles' lead to 4 to 3 against Pettit in the seventh, when Linke beat out a hit to shortstop and Pettit eventually walked Stone to force the run in.

The eighth saw the Orioles making a bush-league display in the field. Third Baseman Martin threw Mihalic's ground ball into right field and young Crompton celebrated his debut at bat for the Nats with a well-tagged single to center. Linke drilled a single through shortstop to tie the score, but the Nats continued from there when Martin made another wild throw on Chapman's grounder.

Schalk Makes Error.

Second Baseman Schalk also had an error in his system and when he muffed Lewis' grounder the Nats went into a 5 to 4 lead, but Martin became 2 up on Schalk for the inning when he muffed Bluege's Lavern Baxter Proves He Is Badder Mans Than His Mat Rival.

Lavern Baxter, the No. 1 public mat enemy, tossed Wee Willie Davis, a less highly regarded bad man, in 16 minutes before 2,000 excited fans at Turner's Arena last night—and what did you expect?

The finish came after the brawl had become so rough Promoter Joe Turner was forced to crawl in the ring to deliver a peace-on-earth, good-will-to-men lecture. The Turner lecture subdued Baxter and the shock of finding himself tamed down was so great he quickly stopped Davis.

Referee Benjamin (Gypsy Rose Lee) Bortnick was again almost completely disrobed, piece by piece, by Baxter, who seems to delight in stripping the portly arbiter.

Turner clambered into the ring at a time when Baxter was on the bottom, Bortnick in between and Davis on top. Baxter had just complicated matters by tying Davis' shoestrings together, hobbling him. Turner chided the contestants, Davis' feet were loosed and they returned to action.

Davis slammed Baxter exactly six times, then Baxter slammed Wee Willie. Wee Willie bounced back and was in the process of picking up Baxter for another slam when he fell over backward, and was counted out by Bortnick.

In 30-minute time limit bouts, Chief Little Wolf downed Matros Kirilenko, Hank Barber flopped Marshall Blackstock, Bernie Kaplan threw Joe Maynard and Henri Piers won on a disqualification from Jack Hader.

Whichever KISSES can you expect?

Smokers' test shows that White Owls are at least 25% easier on your breath

It's good judgment to keep your breath sweet—and good taste to smoke a Vintage cigar. Smoke a White Owl and score on both counts.

New scientific discoveries have shown that White Owl's Vintage tobacco is exceptionally low in the substances that cause unpleasant tobacco breath. Tests with a delicate osmoscope prove that this tobacco leaves less odor on your breath.

White Owl is a better cigar because it always has a Vintage-tobacco filler. Nature—not factory processing—made this tobacco exceptionally mild, mellow and fragrant.

We maintain a vast crop-inspection system—the only known organization of its kind—to locate Vintage tobacco. Even in Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—and buy only tobacco of the quality of the top three for use in White Owls.

Switch to Vintage White Owls today. You'll have better taste—real flavor all day long. And tonight you'll get three cheers from the ladies.

Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity. Ten different brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was at least 25% easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

PITCHER KENDALL CHASE—Clarke Griffith's own protege . . . picked up by Griffith back in 1933 when a man named Jones (no kidding) wrote the Nats' owner a letter describing the talents of a young fellow named Chase who had just pitched a no-hit-no-run game for the Oneonta, N. Y., team against Binghamton. . . . Griff invited him down to Yankee Stadium when the Nats visited New York, watched him throw, signed him to a Chattanooga contract. . . . Brought to the Nats in the spring of '36 and farmed to Chattanooga again . . . was overworked at Chattanooga and lost ten games while winning three.

* * * *

The Nats like his potentialities, however . . . tall, gangling, curly-headed left-hander who looks his age, 23. . . . Actually throws the fastest ball of any pitcher with the club, but lacks control. . . . His fast ball is inclined to rise and he has instructions to start it lower . . . it helps. . . . Back home in Oneonta he's a milk peddler . . . for his father's dairy. . . . Wrestling with 15-gallon cans keeps him in shape during the winter and his weight doesn't vary five pounds from the 175 figure.

* * * *

Kinda cocky, thinks he'll make good this season if he gets a real chance . . . for two years has played second fiddle to Dick Lanahan among the Nats' rookie left-handers, but thinks he's a better pitcher than Lanahan . . . he might be, according to Griffith. . . . Liked by old Alec McColl for his speed and competitive heart. Has gumption. . . . Refused to play for Albany when the Nats sought to transfer him there last year, because he didn't like Joe Cambria, Albany owner. . . . Said he'd rather quit baseball . . . but the Nats wouldn't release him!—

Marson, $7.10, Easily Wins Tropical Park Sprint Feature

Ridge Mor, Co-Choice, Out of Pay

Harvesting Is Second by 4 Lengths; Woof in Third Position.

By the Associated Press.

Joseph Pepp's Harvesting, receiving little support in the betting, trailed Marson by four lengths and held a similiar margin over Mrs. E. A. Rotelli's Woof. Marson paid $7.10 and his time was 1:11 3-5. Ridge Mor, split choice with Marson, never could better fourth position.

The Medway Stable's Earl Porter, which was claimed from W. N. Adrians on the occasion of his recent winning effort, ran a dismal race under Eddie Arcaro. Breaking last, Tropical Park, Fla., March 25.—Mrs. F. Rossiter's 5-year-old Marson, a gelding that earned $50 last year and failed to win a race in eight starts, easily defeated five other Class C sprinters in the Le Jeune Handicap of 6 furlongs here this afternoon. The black son of Misstep went winnerless in five 1937 starts prior to his galloping victory on St. Patrick's Day. He was claimed from Le Mar Stock Farm for $1,750 that day and in this, his first appearance in Mrs. Rossiter's silks, he ran right back to that effort.

he remained there and never was a factor.

Marson dominated the running. He shook off Woof early and opened up a commanding advantage over Harvesting. The latter was unable to gain an inch on the winner but was easily next best. Woof just lasted to beat Ridge Mor.

The 6-year-old Kawagoe, an easy winner a few days ago, put favorite players in the hole right off the bat as the sport opened here today. Backed down to 13 to 10, the Jacobs plater played second fiddle to the $16.80 shot Sam Worthy, which led the choice home by a length and a half. Good Dame was third, a length farther away. Sam Worthy caught Good Dame after the first quarter mile, opened up daylight as Kawagoe moved into the runner-up position and held the latter safe in handy fashion. The time was 1:12 flat for the six furlongs, made over a fast track.

As in the first event, Jockeys Eddie Arcaro and Wayne Wright finished one, two. Second Guess, which had finished second in his last four efforts, finally broke the jinx and clicked by a half length at $11.90 for $2. Stool Pigeon weakened after setting the pace but held on to the place, a head before Dark War. Second Guess, kept in fourth place into the stretch, closed with a thrilling burst of speed on the outside and, aided by Arcaro's powerful driving, got up a few feet from the wire.

Lilfth, a daughter of Vander Pool, which was such a sensation in Florida as a juvenile, surprised by easily defeating a big band of maiden 2-year-old fillies in the third. Breaking alertly and dashing into an early lead, the $23.10 for $2 chance widened the gap the farther she went and won with three lengths to spare over Shred, the chief contender in the running. Playful Jest was a long shot third, another length behind, while the favored My Pauline was fourth. The latter and the well-touted Housekeeper were among those interfered with in a scramble at the break.

"Big Bert" Michell, who saddled so many winners for Mrs. Emil Denemark and E. D. Shaffer until the current meeting began, sent out his first winner since the Hialeah Park session, when Phlox won the fourth dash. Bearing the Shaffer silks and favorite at $3.30 for $2, the Bull Dog filly had a hard time beating Company by a half length.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Selections at Tropical Park.

Maryland may get a peek at Billy Royal Neal, the jockey who is leading the American riders this year. There is a possibility that he will show his wares either late in the Bowie meeting or at Havre de Grace. However, his chief spring campaigning will be at Narragansett Park which opens on May 1. Neal, who has ridden 78 winners, 53 seconds and 40 thirds, is leading B. James, the 1936 champion, by 30 wins and he has the excellent winning percentage of .25. Neal is anxious to keep in action every minute now because he loses his apprentice allowance in the last week of April. Billy is the sixth member of his family to take up the riding profession. He was born in Salem, Oreg., on April 6, 1916, and rode his first winner, Sun Idol, at Arlington Downs on April 24, 1936. His father acts as his agent and has shown keen judgment in the selection of mounts. However, Billy, now that he has what the horsemen call "a hot hand," is in demand by handlers who believe their charges have a chance. Harry Richards, who rode Rosemont to victory in the $100,000 added must have been looking over my shoulder for he give Fervid, one of Santa Anita Handicap, is going to ride at Bowie. Clocker Mike must have been looking over my shoulder for he gives Fervid, one of my picks, as his good thing for tomorrow. BILL.

First race—Slippery Jim seems to have found a right spot in the day's opener. He will have LeBlanc to do the riding and gets in with only 105 pounds. Royal Flight of the the Wodock entry looms as the one to beat. Play Line promises to be a formidable contender.

Second race—Whittle appears to have the edge in this cheap field of maidens. He is no great shakes but with Wright aboard he may take down the chief award. Town Crier is dangerous. Head Hunter for the show.

Third race—Eastorian ran a fair race last out and has an inside post position in the bulky field. I'm expecting a smashing race. Maetake has had numerous chances. Miss Collins, no relation to Tom Collins, for the minor pay-off.

Fourth race—In another maiden affair, I prefer the chances of Charmed Circle. Minster and Dr. Heiman are fair critters and may occupy money position when it's all said and done.

Fifth race—Pre War is at tops now and deserves a pick on the top of this heap. The Linder entry of Lone Hand and Pay Rack promises to go places. The Singer's last was a smart performance and he should be a keen competitor.

Sixth race—Veiled Lady, she of the many chances, seems ideally placed at this long route. She needs only the right handling. Van Nuys and Bred In Blue for the place and show.

Seventh race—I'm going to give Berry Patch one more opportunity to make good. In with 100 pounds, this fellow promises to do a lot of hustling. Midnight Flyer and Trujillo for the other picture places.

Eighth race—Fervid, after a rest, seems to be regaining form and may take down the main money. Winter Sport is better than generally rated and may force the sluggish Treasure Ship into third money.

Best Bet—Veiled Lady.

Saugstad Ruled Winner in A. A. U. Mix-Up

Ring Solons Fail to Act On Twomey

District Guards Threatened to Withdraw From Tourney.

By Bill McCormick.

The District Boxing Commission yesterday reversed the last of many decisions handed down from the ring by Referee Robert (Muggsy) Morris in a comedy of errors terminating the Eddie Saugstad-Jim Koustenas bout at Turner's Arena last Wednesday night.

The commission decreed that Saugstad, an entry from the National Guard, was the official winner and, as such, had advanced to the finals of the District A. A. U. championships, in which the fiasco occurred.

The commission's decision was based largely on the fact that Morris had first declared Saugstad the winner on a technical knockout over the Washington Boys' Club entry, then reversed the decision, which is prohibited by the official rules.

As evidence of the fact that Morris had first declared Saugstad the winner, the commission pointed out that on his score sheet, the referee had first written Saugstad's name as winner, then crossed it out and substituted "Koustenas" following a turmoil in an dout of the ring.

The decision was handed down by Commissioners Kenneth Parkinson and Claude W. Owen. Chairman Ernest Brown, who also is superintendent of police, was not able to pass on the matter because he was occupied during the day in Congress.

Morris' public display of right-about face tactics came in the third round between the two contenders for 118-pound honors. With matters even, Saugstad floored Koustenas with a right to the chin. Koustenas rose without a count and Morris stepped between the fighters, waving Saugstad to his corner and leading the Boys' Club battler to his corner, evidently intending to halt the bout.

Koustenas protested and the crowd roared disapproval. Morris then waved the fighters back into action. At this point, Matt Twomey, coach of the Guard team, jumped in the ring, protesting that the bout had been officially halted and his boy was the winner.

The right to change a decision, however, is specifically denied the third man in the ring. It was on this account that Saugstad was declared the final and official victor.

The commission's decision in no manner absolved Twomey for entering the ring before the bout was officially terminated, it was stated yesterday. While, under the circumstances, it is not believed mandatory that his license be revoked, the commission will debate his status at a later date.

Nats Win, 6 to 4, From Baltimore

ground ball and the Nats had their 2-run lead.

Manager Bucky Harris' first impressions of young Crompton as a catcher must have been flattering to the rookie. In his first time at bat he banged a solid single to center and in his only other appearance he thumped a liner to First Baseman Abernathy that all but knocked that 200-pounder over.

The Nats will attempt to expand their sizable winning streak in the grapefruit league to seven straight tomorrow when the Detroit Tigers visit Tinker Field.

Buck Newsom, who has ambitions to be the first Washington pitcher to work nine innings, will divide the Nats' pitching duties with Monte Weaver.

First baseman Joe Kuhel is not expected to be in the Nats' line-up against the Tigers. He remained in his room last night, his head surrounded with ice packs, after being beaned by a pitch by Leon Pettit at Winter Garden today. Kuhel's injury, though painful, is not serious, according to Trainer Mike Martin.

Wiffy Cox and Leo Walper, Washington contestants, finished out of the money. Cox reported a pair of 79's while Walper posted an 80 and 77. No other D. C. players qualified for the final two rounds.

52 Swimmers Seek District Titles Tonight

With 52 contestants already entered, the 1937 District A. A. U. swimming championships promise to furnish one of their most colorful performances tonight when they open the two-day competition in the Shoreham Pool.

Topping the field is Bob Jordan, Massanutten Military Academy's freestyle star and former Central High boy, who is expected to shatter both the 50 and 100 yard marks in the men's freestyle. Jordan is making his first appearance here since he defeated Peter Fick, National freestyle sprint champion, earlier in the year.

Also occupying a niche in the program is comely June Booth, 16-year-old back-stroke queen of the District, and a Washington hope for swiming fame. Little Ann Bono, District 50-yard freestyle champion, also shares a big spot on the card, and is expected to again shave her own record for the distance.

In the men's races, Karl Schmidt, of the Central Y. M. C. A., looms as Jordan's biggest worry, but his best time is still far short of Jordan's. In the 150-yard backstroke for men, five clubs have entered 10 men seeking to capture the title now held by the "Y's" Ernie Boggs, District champion.

Yesterday's entries brought the total to seven for the Shoreham, nine for the "Y," eight for Ambassador and seven each for Wilson and Western High.

The race for the team total as usual contributes a sparkling duel to the occasion with Western High, the "Y," the Shoreham and Ambassador the leading clubs entered.

Four finals are slated for tonight, namely the women's 50 and 220 yard freestyle races, the women's 100-yard backstroke and the men's 300-yard medley relay. Tomorrow's races involve finals exclusively.

Time Out!

Title Battle May Return To New York

Shift in Principals Is Also Seen as Garden Presses Fight.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 25—Peering through the fistic fogs today it seems from a longshoreman's viewpoint that the heavyweight title craft, buffeted in a gale of dispute ever since it hauled off suddenly for Chicago, may yet be steered right back in New York.

One dockhand's guess may be as good as another's, but latest developments on the waterfront indicate (a) arrangements for Champion James J Braddock's fight with Joe Louis at Chicago, June 22, are not so firmly under control as they previously appeared; (b) Madison Square Garden's legal weapons already have proved potent enough to put the titleholder himself to flight, and (c) some of the parties most heavily involved, fearing the ultimate consequences of giving the Garden the "run-around," already are feeling their way toward shore on a compromise basis

Legislative action in Illinois, designed to limit ticket prices to $10 top, shows how the boat can be rocked. Meantime the Garden, after touching off a warning legal rocket at Miami, is prepared to fire a broadside off the shores of Lake Michigan, if necessary, in order to keep control over the former dock worker, Braddock

If the Chicago match winds up on the rocks, it will not shock some of our most seasoned spyglass operatives to find things patched up so that Louis and Braddock wage their warfare right here in the big town, the winner to stake the heavyweight crown against Max Schmeling in September

Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the State athletic commission, refused to comment upon published stories that "pressure" would be brought to bear to obtain sanction of a Louis-Braddock fight here, with consequent side tracking of Schmeling's existing agreement for a title match with Braddock under the Garden's auspices on June 3.

Fame, Fortune Gone, McTigue Takes 'Rest'

By Edward J. Neil.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, March 25.—They sent "Bowld Michael" McTigue, once the greatest 175-pound man in the world with his fists, off to Rockland County Hospital today to rest his battered head and test his sanity.

It was mostly Michael's own doing.

Forty-five years old now, flabby, the $500,000 fortune he won in the ring gone the way of bad investments, and lonely with fame and attention gone, Michael, by his own admission, has been drinking heavily for a long time.

He had gotten down to jobs that paid a dollar or two a day. When in his cups the fighting urge rode high in him again, and he has taken several bad beatings lately. The most recent of these was in a subway, when five thugs beset him and creased his head with fists and blackjacks.

He walked into a police station in The Bronx three weeks ago, shaking and sick, and told the officers, many of whom had seen him fight men like Paul Berlenbach and Young Stribling for the world light-heavyweight title:

"I've got the D. T.'s, do something for me."

So Michael went to the alcoholic ward at Bellevue Hospital, and today he appeared before State Supreme Court Justice Charles B. McLaughlin on the question of committing him to an institution for the mentally ill. Doctors said he had hallucinations.

Jimmy Johnston, who managed "Bowld Michael" in the late days of his long career, offered to pay the expenses of a private institution.

"Say," he snorted. "That Michael isn't crazy. He's just been telling lies again. He always was a great liar. But he's a harmless liar."

"The doctors think he's crazy because he got cute when they asked him questions," said Jimmy. "One of them says 'Do you ever hear voices when you're alone in your room.'

"'Sure,' says Mike."

"'What kind?' says the doctors."

"Why the voices over my telephone. I'm all alone then, ain't I?' yells Mike, thinking he's being very smart.

"It's best for him, I guess, but he's not crazy. He's just cute."

Sports in Brief

Winter Garden Fla.—Judge K. M. Landis, baseball commissioner, notified managers and players of the Baltimore Orioles to meet with him tomorrow to discuss charges Max Bishop made against Manager Cuy Sturdy. Bishop, a former Oriole now scouting for the Detroit Tigers, attacked Sturdy in a talk at a Knights of Columbus meeting last winter.

Boston—Getting away to a fast start, the Boston Bruins blanked the Montreal Maroons, 4 to 0, before 16,000 tonight to square the National Hockey League second-place play-off series at 1 all.

New York—Dick Himber, New York orchestra leader, today offered to make up the $1,000 salary difference between Holdout Pitcher Red Ruffing and the New York Yankees. Ruffing, one of the best pinch-hitting pitchers in the game, was offered a $15,000 contract by the Yankees.

Baltimore—Ten Army posts of Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia will be represented in the annual Third Corps Area boxing tournament next week. Fifty-five fighters are scheduled to compete in the preliminary rounds to be fought Monday and Tuesday nights at Camp Holabird.

Minneapolis—The angriest man in Minneapolis today was Charles C. Imel, swimming coach of Kenyon College, at Gambier, Ohio.

Imel, with a squad of five swimmers, arrived today after a 900-mile automobile trip to participate in the fourteenth annual national intercollegiate championships at the University of Minnesota Friday and Saturday.

Upon arriving, Imel was informed his entries had been scratched because Kenyon is not a member of the National Intercollegiate Association.

New York.—The New York Rangers wrested their way into the second round of the National Hockey League Stanley Cup play-offs tonight with a 2-1 overtime victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Providence, R. I.—George E. "Eck" Allen, graduate of University of West Virginia, and present coach of football, track and basketball at Parkersburg (W. Va.) High School, was named Brown varsity backfield coach by the athletic council tonight.

Record Field To Seek U.S. Swim Title

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, March 25.—The greatest collection of swimming celebrities assembled since last year's Olympics start competition tomorrow in the two-day fourteenth annual intercollegiate championships at the University of Minnesota.

Twenty-six colleges and universities have entered ace swimmers in an effort to dethrone the University of Michigan as national champion, and collect glory in individual performances.

With the cream of college competitors vying, officials anticipate possible liquidation of many records.

The Minnesota pool, one of the most modern indoor tanks in the country, is especially designed for speed. When the big ten meet was held here in 1936, six conference and one world's mark slipped by the boards.

Eleven events are included in the two day program—the 1,500 meter free style, 400-yard relay, 200-yard breast stroke, 150-yard back stroke, 50-yard free style, 440-yard free style, 100-yard free style, one meter and three meter diving, 220-yard free style and 300-yard medley relay.

POST NOTES ON Fishin'

BY BILL ACKERMAN

According to the United States Biological Survey, Canada, Mexico and the United States are now linked in co-operative efforts to extend protection to wildlife in general, because of the treaty recently signed by Mexico and the United States.

It provides protection for 140 species of migratory birds, over a period of 15 years, with the stipulation of continuation, if necessary. It also limits the hunting of these birds to but four months in each year and closes the season on ducks in both countries, from March 10 to September 1.

ACKERMAN

With fish conservation so rampant, it might be well to give some little thought to the striped bass, or in parlance of the bay, "rock."

Since the advent of the first colonists they have been rated in the Chesapeake country as a food fish. Caught in size and numbers unbelievable, the once great hordes have dwindled to occasional large schools, that immediately upon their appearance, are set upon by the commercial fishermen. In spite of which they seem to make out almost as well as in sections where non-sale laws have been passed, only to become the target for the shafts of the commercial men.

Last year New Jersey stocked every river and bay with this grand sport fish and so rated them in the entire State, with the hope that in a few years the great runs of past decades might be experienced again. But what does 12 short months of the new anti-netting law show? The gigging of the half dormant stripers out of the deep holes in which they winter. At one place on the Toms River over 12 tons were so taken in less than a week and sold on the market for the few cents a pound their flesh will bring. It is still going on with game wardens, conservation officials and others interested organizations unable to do anything about it, while the Legislature dilly-dallies and fusses as to ways and means.

* * * *

Now turn to the Pacific Coast where the striped bass is an introduction of little more than 40 years, but which, in less than 25 of them, started returning to the commercial men many millions of pounds annually. Then due to wasteful taking a nonsale law was passed in some areas and the rock is supplying the game for great rodeos and contests that draw sportsmen for many miles.

San Francisco Bay claims 68,000 bass fishermen, because the nonsale law made a really lucrative pastime; yet in less than two years the law becomes the target of the commercial interests, who are advocating its repeal. It is thought unlikely that it will be rescinded, because for once the anglers are in every way standing up for their rights.

* * * *

Back to Chesapeake Bay again, for strange as it may seem, there is being conducted a survey of the striped bass. Sometime soon it is hoped some definite news can be carried in regard to what has been accomplished. The thought to keep in mind is what a great sport center the bay will be if the findings are for conservation and protection and they are carried out.

* * * *

Innkeepers and others in the Oregon Inlet and nearby sections have at last come to life and this year for the first time are showing enough interest in the sportsman's dollar to write their guests of other years and point out the desirability of making reservations ahead. This has almost become mandatory because of the publicity this section has received in the past two years, due to the great schools of blues that hit there each April.

They are even now moving up the coast of Florida and given the right weather conditions, it won't be long before they will be in this section. If you are one that puts your tackle away, like most of us do, without overhauling, get busy.

* * * *

Codfish anglers, those hardy outdoorsmen who fish for the big fellows on the offshore banks, right through the cold weather, have put that aside and are after the flounders in Peconic Bay, Long Island. While the catches are small and the individual fish only run to a pound or two, still they are having plenty of fun, with the knowledge that the new season is very close and the great schools of fish will soon be offshore.

Yanks Pound Homers, Rout Bees by 6 to 2

By the Associated Press.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 25.—The New York Yankees turned to their specialty, home runs, to whip the Boston Bees for the fifth straight time, today, 6 to 2. Bill Dickey and Tony Lazzeri contributed circuit clouts while Lefty Gomez and Steve Sundra were limiting the bees to four hits. George Selkirk, the Yankees' right fielder, ran wild on the bases, stealing second and third after singling in the sixth and then engineering a double steal with Babe Dahlgren to complete his trip around the bases.

Cards Lose, 4 to 3.

Deland, Fla.—The St. Louis Cardinals dropped a 10-inning decision today to Columbus of the American Association, 4 to 3. The Cards broke a 2-to-2 tie with a run in the tenth inning, but the major leaguers' farm club bounced back in the last half with two.

Paul Dean started on the mound for the Cards and improved after a bad first inning in which he was pounded for four singles. Don Gutteridge, Cardinal third baseman, led his teams' attack with a home run, double and single.

Sarasota, Fla.—Philadelphia's lowly Phillies banged out a 7-to-0 triumph over the Boston Red Sox here today behind the 4-hit pitching of the veteran "Bucky" Walters.

John (Footsie) Marcum toiled five innings for the Yankeymen and held the Phils runless. Jack Wilson succeeded him on the mound and was pounded for six big runs in the sixth inning.

Indians Win, 8-1.

New Orleans, La.—Postmaster General James A. Farley watched from a box today as the Cleveland Indians walloped the New Orleans Pelicans, 8 to 1.

Harder allowed but three hits in as many stanzas, two of them scratchy infield blows. Whitehill gave a pair of hits in three innings. Hal Trosky, Indians' first sacker, rifled a home run in the sixth with two mates on the runways.

Cubs to Play Chisox.

Avalon, Calif.—After two weeks of some of the worst training camp weather the club ever has experienced, the Chicago Cubs headed last night for Los Angeles and their battle tomorrow with an old rival, the Chicago White Sox. Larry French will start on the hill for the Bruins with Roy Parmelee scheduled to finish.

Browns Win, 5-2.

Lockhart, Tex.—The Brown Regulars, under direction of Manager Rogers Hornsby, took advantage of Pitcher Sigmund Jakucki's wildness yesterday and scored a 5-to-2 victory over Jim Bottomley's Yannigans in a club practice game.

Harry Davis, Regulars' first sacker, had a perfect day at bat, with a triple and two singles in three trips.

Reds Beat Newark.

Sebring, Fla.—Rookie Pitchers Johnny Van der Meer and Lloyd Moore, whom Manager Charles Dressen hopes will make the major league grade this season, held Newark of the International League to four hits yesterday to give Cincinnati a 1 to 0 exhibition game victory.

All the Cincinnati hits were made by rookies, Van der Meer contributing a two-bagger that went to waste.

Los Angeles, Calif.—A four-run blast in the fifth inning, with Fred Schulte and Wilbur Brubaker hitting home runs, gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6 to 5 victory over the Chicago White Sox in an exhibition tussle yesterday.

Trailing by a run as they came to bat in the fifth, Schulte cracked his homer to left. After Hafey fanned and Dickshot grounded, Vaughan doubled and scored on Suhr's single. Suhr taking second on a wild pitch. He scored seconds later on Brubaker's circuit smash, after which Handley popped out.

Brisk Demand For Corn Sets Ten-Year Peak

Buying Lifts Prices 3⅛ Cents a Bushel; May at $1.14½.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 25.—Suddenly outdoing high price records of the last ten years, corn became the grain trade's star performer today, and soared 3⅛ cents a bushel.

Heavy demand here for corn available to be used without delay led to the upward flight of prices. A consequence was that contracts for future deliveries of corn went skyrocketing. May and July both surpassing previous peak quotations since, respectively, 1927 and 1928. September overtopped the present season's apex.

At the close, the corn market was ¾@2¾ cents a bushel higher than 24 hours previous, May $1.14½@⅝, July $1.09@1.09⅛, September $1.03⅞@1.04, wheat unchanged to 1 cent higher, May $1.40¾@⅞, July $1.26¾@⅞, September $1.23⅝@¾, oats ⅜@⅝ up, May 47¾, and rye varying from 1¾ loss to ¾ advance, May $1.12. Argentina to Defer Refunding Operation

New York, March 25 (AP).—The Argentine government has decided to defer offering of $42,000,000 in refunding bonds recently registered with the securities and exchange commission because market conditions at present do not appear favorable, Dr. C. Alonso Irigoyen, financial attache of the Argentine Embassy announced today.

The refunding operation necessary to the retirement of two 6 per cent issues by October 1 will be made from cash resources of the Treasury, built up largely for the purpose of an issue of internal bonds, he said. "Operations in the (American) market in the near future will therefore be limited to the refunding of about $33,000,000 of 6 per cent dollar bonds," the announcement said.

The weekly condition statement of Federal Reserve banks showed their aggregate holdings of Government securities remained unchanged at $2,430,000,000, with the bond acquisitions making up for a $42,000,000 drop in holdings of Treasury notes and bills.

No indication of the extent of Treasury buying into the Government market was given.

The statement said member bank excess reserves, which provide the basis for credit expansion, decreased $180,000,000 during the week to $1,270,000,000.

Gold stocks, rising $26,000,000, reached a new peak of $11,541,000,000.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Recede From Early Advance in Slow Trading; U. S. Bonds Again Decline.

New York, March 26.—Holiday preparations added to the slackness of financial dealings which has characterized the week. Stocks held a steady tone on a turnover of around 1,250,000 shares, but prices were poorest toward the close. Government bonds began well enough and then found interest waning. They closed lower. Commodities were steady. July wheat closed ¾ of a cent higher at 126¾ cents a bushel.

Steel shares were a feature of the early trading and their strength gave tone to most other groups. U. S. Steel opened more than 2 points higher. Motors were better for a while, but although satisfaction was felt over the prospect of avoidance of rioting in the occupied motor plants at Detroit, no one yet knows the price which may have to be paid to come to a settlement.

Another firm group was the oil section. Wage increases announced by Standard Oil were taken as a precautionary measure against labor difficulties later, a hope which has proved to be vain in certain other industries. At any rate, the industry is in a good earnings position and there is a tendency to look for new supplies. National Supply was shoved up several points on that idea.

When the afternoon closing of short-turn speculative accounts began, as a preparation for the holiday, the market was irregularly higher. On the decline most stocks suffered no more than fractional losses. Rails were uninteresting. Central improved a little, as did Great Northern. Chesapeake & Ohio felt further pressure and sold at a new low. Union Pacific dropped 2 points. Metal shares hardened. International Paper issues moved along.

British View.

The outlook for inflation and higher interest rates in Great Britain appears to be much the same as it is here, except in a matter of degree. Influences at work are the same—namely, expansion of credit through Government expenditures and increasing demands by industry. The monthly circular of Robert Benson & Co. is quoted on the subject:

The doctrine that the government can fix and hold the rate of interest "has failed to take account of a state in which industry is badly underemployed and one in which it is employed at or near capacity. In a state of underemployment, expansion of banking credit by the authorities will help toward expansion of production, and need cause no undue rise in commodity prices and industrial costs—it may, in fact, reduce the latter. When available industrial plant and labor are fully employed further expansion of credit, designed to keep interest rates down, will be likely to cause inflation of prices, since new productive plant can be brought into existence only slowly. Higher prices will involve higher costs, an expansion of industry's credit requirements and a demand for a still further broadening of the credit base."

Our Own Problem.

That is Mr. Eccles' problem, and one of his answers seems to be a further step toward inflation by the cheap money route. In any event, the Treasury is going to help the thing along, for interest rates in time surely will go higher. As they rise the price of Government bonds will fall. The banks at present can't find buyers for their bonds which they would like to sell, outside of official sources, because the yields still are far too low for the public investor.

As many view the problem, before the price gets down to the investment level for individuals, the loss to the banks will be heavy enough to cause another crisis. It can be met, in the case of banks which can hold their Government bonds, by permission to carry them at par, no matter what the market may be. Such permission in case of a crisis is taken for granted. On the other hand, for those banks which find it necessary or desirable to sell, some other means than the open market must be provided, for the banks hold approximately half our huge public debt of between thirty-five and forty billions.

The Easiest Way.

The way that naturally will be opened will be the Federal Reserve banks, already almost completely under the dominance of the Treasury. The Reserve system possibly will be forced, in case of need, to take Government bonds off the hands of the member banks a par or nearly there. The process will, of course, involve an enormous flow of money into the market—that is, a further increase in excess bank reserves and a powerful stimulus to overloading of the Federal Reserve system will tend to weaken confidence in it, for in effect the Treasury will merely be financing itself by printing money. That route would seem to lead in one direction to repudiation through inflation and currency depreciation and in the other to a return to sound finance and a gold currency, which necessarily would involve deflation.

Competitive Bidding.

Investment bankers, as well as corporation officials and others, were much exercised over the remarks before the Bond Club gathering yesterday afternoon made by William O. Douglas of the SEC. In view of the well-known fact of Mr. Douglas' lack of experience in corporate finance and the workings of banking and industry generally, no surprise would have been caused had his views failed to conform with what is regarded as financial orthodoxy in Wall street. However, the assurance of the man in propounding radical opinions that all hands round feel are unsound at top and bottom, led to some apprehension as to what might come of such a course were it followed by the authorities. Some suggestions made by Mr. Douglas supposedly in the interest of reform of management at least merit consideration. Among them were the voting trust. His ground is decidedly infirm on the matter of competitive bidding.

Friend in Need.

The present practice of banking affiliation for corporations is as important as it is for the individual to choose a bank to which he intrusts his funds in prosperous eras. The depression record is full of instances of indispensable help extended to borrowers by investment bankers who felt themselves obligated by their underwriting relationship. It scarcely could be expected that a competitive bidder would feel any such duty. Another point, emphasized by bidding today on a railway equipment trust issue, illustrates another difficulty. The difference between the high and low bids was as much as 2 points. How the high bidder could sell some issues if prospective buyers would point to the low bid, as indicating equally good banking opinion as to the value of the securities offered, would be hard to say.

Railroad Earnings.

Current railroad reports for February and the first two months show better results than those received earlier, but the improvement over a year ago was not large. According to the Sun's compilation the first 33 roads to report had net operating income in February about 0.6 per cent higher than February last year. In the first two months the same carriers reported net operating income approximately 3.9 per cent above 1936.

250 Expected At Dinner of Local Bankers

Preconvention Event to Be Held May 5 at Columbia Country Club.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

From present indications the preconvention dinner of the District of Columbia Bankers Association will be one of the largest in the history of the organization. More than 250 members and guests are expected to attend the assembly at Columbia Country Club, May 5, according to Barnum L. Colton, real estate officer, National Savings & Trust Co., and chairman of the committee.

At this event plans for the annual convention of the association will be outlined. Archibald McLachlen, secretary-treasurer, McLachlen Banking Corporation, who is chairman of this year's general convention committee, will review arrangements for that meeting which will again be held at the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 27-31. Thomas J. Groom, executive vice president and cashier, Bank of Commerce & Savings, and acting president of the association, will preside at the dinner. District Commissioner George E. Allen will be the principal speaker. Numerous Federal officials and other prominent men will be on the guest list. Entertainment has been provided for the dinner and there will be a golf tournament in the afternoon.

I. B. M. Appointment.

Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines Corporation, has announced the promotion of L. Howell LaMotte, divisional manager, to take full charge of all the company's business with the Federal Government in all parts of the United States. He will also have general charge of all the corporation's business with State, county and city governments, and will co-operate in handling foreign government accounts. He will serve as liaison representative between all divisions of the corporation and the Government, and will have the final authority on all contracts between them.

Mr. LaMotte will make his headquarters in Washington, D. C., where he will direct and supervise the service performed by the numerous large installations of electric bookkeeping and accounting machines in various Federal departments and bureaus and will also continue to collaborate with Government officials in maintaining the extensive Social Security Board office installation in Baltimore. The new position, it was stated, is one of the most important in scope and responsibility ever intrusted by the company to an individual.

Davis is the fourth chief executive of the institution, having been preceded by James A. Prescott, Jesse B. Wilson and Richard A. Walker. Mr. Davis became president in July, 1913. Albert S. Gatley, executive vice president, and W. McK. Stowell, a director, have been with the bank since its opening. Its deposits have grown steadily and on December 31 were more than $9,260,000. The main office is located at 318 Seventh street northwest, and there is a branch at Seventeenth and H streets northwest, which is to be enlarged, owing to increased business.

Letter Contest.

At the monthly meeting of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters' Association at the Willard Hotel, yesterday, announcement was made of a national letter writing contest for high school students with appropriate prizes for local and national winning letters to be submitted during "Life Insurance Week," May 17 to 22.

In speaking of this contest, Harold D. Krafft, chairman for the District, said that a recent survey revealed that 143 American colleges and universities are now offering 332 courses of instruction in insurance.

In the high schools, however, no adequate provision for the study of insurance appears to exist, he said,

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 25—Trading in stocks was on a small scale due to the approaching Easter holidays, although prices held steady. Oil shares were firm and steel and market securities sold at higher prices. Home rails and tobaccos attracted attention and foreign bonds were mixed. Other industrials and the mining section were dull.

Paris—The bourse had a generally firm tone and rentes closed slightly higher. Bank of France gained 60 francs and Suez Canal also advanced. Railroad and coal issues were mixed. Royal dutch moved up 66 francs.

Liverpool—Wheat futures touched new highs prices for the year, closed with net gains of ¾d to 2¼d. Italy and Germany were buyers of Argentine grain and weather reports from France and Germany were unfavorable. Cotton futures rallied and closed 4 to 7 points up, on speculative buying influenced by the firm Egyptian market.

Bank of France.

Paris, March 25 (AP).—The Bank of France statement for the week ended March 19 (in millions of francs): Gold reserve, 57,358 (unchanged); right balances abroad, 12 (decrease, 3); bills purchased abroad, 1,261 (decrease, 29); discounted commercial bills —France, 7,738 (decrease, 287); temporary advances to state, prior to June 18, 1936, 19,372 (unchanged); temporary advances to state, since June 18, 1936, 7,500 (unchanged); advances against securities, 3,725 (decrease, 139); circulation, 85,377 (decrease, 1,028); total credit to current accounts, 18,761 (increase, 54); 30-day advances against government securities, 629 (decrease, 679); rate of discount, 4 per cent.

Private Construction Is Double a Year Ago

New York, March 25 (AP).—Spring building expansion was evident today in sharp gains in private engineering construction awards reported by Engineering News-Record. Private construction, the trade publication reported, for the week ended more than doubled the comparable period last year.

Awards totaled $49,006,000, the second highest figure this year, compared with $34,569,000 the preceding week and $32,611,000 in the 1936 week. Private awards amounted to $25,698,000 against $17,925,000 the week before and $11,385,000 in the 1936 period. Public awards accounted for $23,308,000 against $16,644,000 the previous week and $21,226,000 in the 1936 week.

Worthington Pump To Recapitalize

New York, March 25.—A recapitalization plan for Worthington Pump and Machinery Corporation, designed to fund accumulated preferred dividends which aggregated $4,620,502 at the end of 1936, and to reduce preferred dividend requirements, was announced today by H. C. Beaver, president of the corporation. Directors approved the plan at a meeting held yesterday and have called a special meeting of stockholders for May 12, to act upon it.

The proposed plan provides for the creation of a new class of cumulative prior preferred stock. Two series of this new prior preferred stock will be authorized, one convertible and the other non-convertible. Both series will carry dividend rates of 4½ per cent. The plan further provides for an increase in the authorized number of shares of common stock.

Jury Disagrees, Discharged in Davison Trial

Alexandria Mayor's Retrial to Be Delayed Until September.

Judge Luther B. Way, of Federal Court at Alexandria, last night discharged the jury which heard the case of Emmett C. Davison, mayor of Alexandria, when the jury failed to reach an agreement after five hours of deliberations. Davison was charged with concealing assets in bankruptcy.

Retrial of Mayor Davison cannot be until the June term of the court, and when called then probably will be postponed until September, it was said at the courthouse. The jury was discharged at 10:15 p. m.

The case went to the jury at 4:05 p. m. after Chief Defense Attorney William E. Leahy and Prosecutor Sterling Hutcheson had concluded their final arguments. Judge Luther B. Way charged the jury.

At 5:30 p. m. the jury called for the transcript of the original bankruptcy hearing. Davison filed his bankrupt petition on November 18, 1935.

Attorneys Battle.

In his final argument, which occupied an hour and a half, Hutcheson declared that Davison had been "evasive" throughout the trial. Leahy, defense attorney, argued that there had been no concealment of assets with fraudulent intent.

Testimony in the trial mostly concerned Davison's financial transactions. The high spot of the four days occurred Wednesday, when Mrs. Davison collapsed after testifying in her husband's behalf.

Davison, besides being Mayor of Alexandria, is also general secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Machinists.

Hints at Politics.

While winding up the defense argument Leahy intimated that Davison may have been the victim of a political plot.

"Somewhere, somebody is behind this case," Leahy declared. "I don't know whether it's politics, though he comes up for re-election in a few days. I do know this: That someone was out to stab him in the back and I'd like to know why."

Schoolmaster Released In Girl's Torch Murder

New Castle, Ind., March 25 (AP).—Groping for a solution to the torch death of blonde Mabel Sutton, 28, whose body was found in a woods near here Tuesday, authorities questioned and released today a village schoolmaster who, they said, had been her sweetheart in a college romance.

Sheriff Charles E. Zornes said he was convinced Elbert Williams, 30, the teacher, knew nothing about Miss Sutton's death. Williams was a classmate and suitor of the young woman at Ball State Teachers College at Muncie, the sheriff said.
